Germans Fall Back in Italy

STORIES ON PAGE 2

Greatest Yank Invasion Raid

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

LONDON, May 9 (AP)—The American Air Force based in Britain hurled nearly 2000 planes at Europe again today in the 25th day of the non-stop pre-invasion air offensive, smashing at railroads and airdromes in France, Belgium and Luxembourg.

A great fleet of Flying Fortresses and Liberators and their escorting fighters struck 10 separate targets in the three countries — seven airfields and three railroad yards handling German war freight, setting the pace for a series of widespread blows. Judging from channel activity, today may be the heaviest one yet in the huge air campaign.

It was the 15th straight day of heavy bomber operations

LUXEMBOURG HIT TOO

Marauder medium bombers of the 9th U. S. Air Force, which, like the Fortresses and Liberators, flew two missions yesterday, joined with A-20 light bombers in the forenoon assault on military objectives and railroads in northern France and Belgium.

Railroad yards hit by the heavy bombers today were at Liege, Belgium, near the German border, Thiomville, France, north of Metz and in the city of Luxembourg.

An air field at Thiomville also was attacked along with others at St. Dizier, west of Nancy; Laon-Couvron and Laon Athies, northwest of Reims and Laon, all in France, and at St. Trond, northwest of Liege and Florennes, near the French border, both in Belgium.

The mighty daylight blows fell on a continent still shuddering under the weight of explosives dumped last night on railway targets, air fields and other objectives in France, Belgium and Germany by RAF bombers striking multuple targets for the third straight night.

The heavy bombers alone probably scattered at least 2500 tons of explosives over 10 vital targets today, with the RAF unloading probably 2500 tons last night.

Many returning crewmen said flak and fighter opposition were negligible today in contrast to yesterday.

Later today RAF Mitchells and Boston struck another blow at railroads in France, blasting the yards at Valenciennes, 31 miles southeast of Lille.

Battle Rages At Sevastopol

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW, May 9 (AP)—Russian storm troops fought the remnants of two Axis armies in full view of flaming Sevastopol today as their artillery poured salvo after salvo into enemy suicide squads clinging to the last German hold in the Crimea.

Fortified heights overlooking the port city were stormed yesterday.

An Izvestia dispatch declared the German force in the Crimea was definitely defeated and pressed back to the Black Sea.

The Germans were reported fighting desperately.

In the third day of the offensive, Red Star reported the Russians had broken through steel and concrete fortifications all along the Sevastopol line. The Russians were converging from all land sides along an arc within five miles of the city.

The line extended through Mackenzie heights in the northeast through captured Inkerman in the east to the Black Sea coast southwest of Sevastopol.

Hills overlooking the Black sea bristled with big guns, powerful fortifications and barbed wire entanglements, the army newspaper said, leading the Germans and Romanians to believe their positions impregnable.

An old coastal defense fort covered the entrance to the bay and behind it three-storied German defense works were carved in the rocks.

The Red Star dispatch acknowledged capture of these positions was difficult, but said the Russians took the first two hills after a fierce battle and then moved on to seize a third hill in enemy defenses.

CRIMEA—Russian forces have taken Inkerman, Lyubimovka, Mekenzievy Gory and Karan in a new assault of the key Crimean city of Sevastopol. Last formidable barrier to the city is Malakhov Hill.

Leahy Boomed For Navy Secretary

WASHINGTON, May 9 (AP)—Strong sentiment for the appointment of Adm. Leahy as Secretary of the Navy to succeed the late Frank Knox developed in Congress today.

Some members of the Senate and House naval affairs committees said they felt in time of war a professional naval man ought to be in charge of the department's affairs rather than a civilian. Leahy, former chief of naval operations, now serves as chief of staff to the President for both the Army and Navy.

Tito's Armies Recapture Town

LONDON, May 9 (AP)—The Yugoslav Partisan forces of Marshal Tito have recaptured Berane in Montenegro, a broadcast communique said today.

To the north a Partisan band plunged into Brodarevo, burning two enemy bases, killing more than 100 of the enemy and destroying a bridge over the Lim river before withdrawing, the bulletin said.

NEW YORK, May 9 (AP)—Yugoslav Partisan forces ambushed Undersecretary of State Turina of the puppet Croatian government and his party during a recent inspection tour in northern Dalmatia but the group succeeded in shooting its way clear, the Berlin radio said today.

Some of the party were wounded but Turina escaped unharmed, the broadcast said.

Portugal May Halt Shipping Ore to Reich

LISBON, May 9 (AP)—Efforts of the United States and Britain to throttle the flow of strategic minerals from neutral countries to Germany appear likely to result soon in an agreement whereby Portugal will curtail, if not suspend entirely, her wolfram shipments to the Reich.

6 Vatican Fugitives Talk—

Nazis Make Rome 'Hell'

By MICHAEL CHINIGO

WITH ALLIED FORCES, Anzio-Nettuno Sector, May 8 (INS)—A reign of terror, which spares "no place" and "no one," has turned Rome into "a hell on earth," and Vatican City—cordoned with S. S. guards and Nazi secret agents—into a mammoth prison where Pope Pius XII is held in "protective" custody.

Six men who made a mad dash to our lines—and freedom—painted this painful picture of the Eternal City, awaiting Allied liberation:

"Murder is encouraged and Nazi time-tried practices of extortions, hostages and so-called reprisals have reached unparalleled proportions."

They all were near exhaustion and bore evident signs of weeks of mental anguish. One of them, a prominent theater impresario whom I had known well before the war, told me that he and his friends hadn't seen the light of day for over two months.

"Thousands of men of military age," he explained," are in the same plight. They're being hunted down like rats for evading military duty and many are paying with their lives."

Italian officers and men who have been hiding for months from the Nazi command and Mussolini's minions, he revealed, are gradually being forced to "come out and volunteer" because they have exhausted scant resources and face starvation.

These men are dispatched to Florence and "points north," most of them incorporated in the Todt construction organization building roads and fortifications.

"It goes without saying," declared one of the escaped six, "that hunger is forcing some of us to fall into line, when we can't get away but it's a mere handful.

"The Nazis need more men, and to get Italians they have even resorted to raiding movie houses at night, stopping performances and rounding up all males of serviceable age."

Italian movie houses and theaters are consequently said to be practically devoid of males; only women and children dare to walk along Rome's streets in daylight.

"Finger men"—Fascists who receive a premium for uncovering fellow Italians for the Nazis to "nab"—make life unsafe even at home during the hours of darkness, another of the six asserted.

Allied bombings of Rome, they all concurred, has been amazingly accurate, has completely disrupted rail communications—forcing the Nazis to supply their troops by truck convoys.

The impresario, enlarging on activities of the patriots, revealed that the Nazis have developed yet another wrinkle in their horror program of occupied territories.

In the outskirts of Rome, he asserted, the Nazi command rounded up scores of prominent Italians who were allowed to live "fairly" normal lives even to the point of having their wives and children visit them."

Out of this group of innocent people Marshal Kesselring drew victims for his execution squads—ten Italians to one German—when one Nazi fell to the Italian patriots.

The Vatican was described as comparatively quiet but in the "physical" possession of the Nazi command.

Italians going to and from the Vatican grounds—including Vatican citizens—are regularly frisked by Nazi secret agents who "abound even inside Vatican grounds."

Nazis Fall Back On Adriatic Line

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

NAPLES, May 9 (INS)—German forces on the Adriatic side of the battle line in Italy withdrew today behind a series of demolitions and were quickly pursued by Allied troops.

The withdrawal was carried out in the mountainous sector south of the Monte Maiella range, near the Aventino river, 25 miles from the Adriatic coast.

The Nazis dropped back in the area of Palena, 33 miles south of Pescara.

"In the mountainous sector of the main front, our troops followed up the withdrawal of the enemy south of Monte Maiella," a communique from Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson said.

The withdrawal was the first in this area of the Adriatic front since December, but during that time the Nazis had only thinly defended the sector.

Headquarters disclosed the first signs of enemy withdrawal were observed Saturday night and said the retirement had continued since.

A number of explosions were heard that night and the Germans were discovered to have blown up bridges, houses and a tunnel near Palena. Subsequently there was considerable shelling and mortar fire along the left flank of the withdrawal area.

Along the lower Garigliano valley American artillery fired successfully against German motor trucks west of Minturno.

The beachhead front immediately below Rome was quiet, although the German reacted sensitively to Allied patroling, notably southwest of Cisterna. There German artillery fire was heavier against Allied rear areas.

Allies Advance in East India

By CHARLES A. GRUMICH

SOUTHEAST ASIA HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, May 9 (AP)—Allied troops have advanced in all sectors around the Imphal plain of eastern India, Admiral Mountbatten's headquarters announced today, but Japanese forces are attacking in the Ft. Hertz valley of northern Burma, where the Allies are driving for the major enemy base of Myitkyina.

A communique said Japanese troops left more than 750 dead in the Kohima area between May 4 and 6 and that further heavy casualties had been inflicted since.

The Japanese attack in the Ft. Hertz valley was reported taking place northwest of Nsopzur. Burmese fighting for the Allies were last reported about 45 miles north of Myitkyina.

The Japanese base also is menaced by Gen. Stilwell's Chinese and American troops in the Mogaung valley.

A communique said tank-supported Allied infantry following up heavy bombing by Allied aircraft drove the Japanese from a village two miles south of Bishenpur.

Allied troops also advanced both northeast and south of Palel, capturing hills and villages, the bulletin said.

"In all sectors around the Imphal plain we have obtained local successes," the communique declared.

A statement from Allied headquarters said meanwhile that a communique issued here yesterday had erred in saying the Japanese were on the offensive in the Manipur hills sector of northeastern India.

The Japanese actually are on the defensive in that area, the statement said. The error resulted from garbled signals in the transmission of data being assembled from various fronts.

The explanation said the first paragraph of the communique should have read:

"On all sectors of the Assam front the Japanese are now generally on the defensive."

(The Tokyo radio asserted today Japanese dive-bombers, May 5 and 6, had inflicted "heavy blows" on Allied artillery positions and tank formations in the Kohima area.)

In 51 days of operations over the Arakan front in western Burma, the American "sky ambush" squadron of P-38 fighters has definitely destroyed 73 Japanese aircraft, probably destroyed 15 others and damaged 15 more.

Officers of the Third Air Force said most of the successes were scored in attacks on enemy airfields and about half the Japanese planes accounted for were shot down in combat while the others were destroyed on the ground.

Act to Salvage Huge Fish Haul

In an attempt to salvage millions of pounds of fish waiting to be unloaded from boats in Boston and New Bedford, where 250,000 pounds already have been dumped because of spoilage, War Manpower officials today moved to divert labor reinforcements to New England's undermanned fish industry.

The worst shortage in fish handlers and processors exists at New Bedford. In that city, inspectors ordered 200,000 pounds of spoiled fish thrown back into the sea. Thousands of pounds more are being given away to farmers and Victory gardeners for fertilizer

Also, fresh fish on New Bedford piers is selling below OPA ceilings for the first time since price controls were established last July. OPA officials were seen ready to scale down their fish price schedules in order to promote greater consumption.

PRICES GO UP

Despite the glut on the market, prices for popular varieties of fish have actually gone up in Boston and other New England cities during the past few days.

Boston's labor situation, while serious, was regarded as considerably better than New Bedford's. It was improved when a group of handlers at Fish Pier decided to return to their jobs, following a brief walkout caused by a dispute concerning overtime pay.

William C. Harrington, regional co-ordinator of fisheries, U. S. Interior Department, held additional conferences with WMC and WPB officials over the local manpower shortage, especially as it affects the Commonwealth Ice & Cold Storage Co., Fish Pier, where most of the Boston loss in fish occurred.

BLAME WALKOUT

The spoilage, it was charged, was caused by a walkout of fish handlers at local cold storage plants who refused to work overtime last Sunday.

Due to the fact they were not placed in freezers more than 45,000 pounds of fish, including 38,000 pounds of flounder filets, were condemned at the Fish Pier by Walter Slater, state health inspector of the fish and wildlife service.

Children in Rites For Burned Girl

While 10 of her little schoolmates stood in somber file at the grave's edge, the body of eight-year-old Florence Ward, who died Saturday in City Hospital as the result of severe burns, was laid at rest today in Calvary Cemetery, Woburn.

Her mother, Mrs. George Ward, could not restrain her grief. Badly burned in the same household blaze that cost her daughter's life, she sobbed as she stood with bandaged arm and listened to the commital prayers.

At the end she was solaced and led to a waiting automobile by her husband and the Rev. Leo V. McGann, who officiated at the cemetery and in St. Charles' Church.

The little girl's funeral was from the home of her uncle, William Ward, Richmond st., Woburn.

5 BOYS AND 5 GIRLS

There, at either side of the door while the small white casket was being taken to the church, stood five boys and five girls who had been Florence's classmates at the Park School.

They were: Irene Tonks, Robert Seminatore, Hoar and Robert Adams, all first grade pupils; Joan Barry, Daniel Gately and Mildred Carlson, of the second grade; and Gerald Seminatore, Donald Manning and Roberta Voutiritsa, third grade pupils.

Honorary pallbearers all, they were led then to the church by a teacher, Miss Mary Jones, where they followed the little white casket to the altar as it was borne by adult bearers.

OTHER FRIENDS THERE

Already seated as the processional entered were more than a score of children with whom Florence had played and attended school.

Fr. McGann officiated at a requiem mass.

For several of the small honorary pallbearers it was the first funeral they had ever attended. The solemnity of the committal rites at the cemetery left them with sober faces and, in more than one case, tear-stained cheeks.

The spiritual consolation in the clergyman's final prayers gave Mrs. Ward strength throughout her ordeal but she could not hold back the maternal lament.

"My poor baby!" was her sob as she was led from the grave.

Singer's Silk Undies Stolen

One of the worst blows to womanhood today has fallen on the household of Sally Harris, 28-year-old Boston night club blues singer who, in the nation's emergency, is doubling as a war plant worker in the daytime.

Some calloused thief stripped the Harris clothesline in Columbia st., Cambridge, of $116 worth of undies and raiment, including two pairs of nylon stockings. No only that, but the black-hearted thief even made away with the clothespins.

Sally, who entertained the King and Queen of England at Quebec and who sent some of the silken garments back home from Cuba, where she was filling an engagement, ha dto go to work today in old and tattered undies, her father, Morris Harris, restaurant proprietor, said in reporting the theft to police.

Included in the stolen articles owned by Sally and her mother, wer nine silk slips, 18 silk panties, four silk nightgowns, four pairs of silk and rayon stockings, five silk blouses and six bras.

The other daughter of the household, Mrs. Mildred Harris Kauf, 24, was more fortunate. She didn't hank out her scanties at the same time. But she wears a smaller size than her mother and sister—so she's no help to Sally.

Cromwell Opens Divorce Fight

ELIZABETH, N. J., May 9 (AP)—Visitors from distant points were here for the opening this afternoon of divorce proceedings by James H. R. Cromwell, former U. S. minister to Canada, against tobacco heiress Doris Duke Cromwell.

Neither Mrs. Cromwell nor her mother had been reached by process servers.

Cromwell has brought suit to nullify Mrs. Cromwell's Nevada divorce decree and to obtain a divorce of his own.

Meyer H. Ruback, the former minister's counsel, has said he did not except Cromwell would take the stand at today's hearing on the nullification. Ruback predicted he might wait until Cromwell's own divorce proceedings came up.

Depositions from witnesses in places as distant as Honolulu and London, as well as California, Washington, and Ottawa, were in Ruback's possession and would be read at the hearings, he said.

Atty. John J. Clancy, commissioned by the court to take the testimony of Mrs. Cromwell and her mother, Mrs. Nanaline Duke, had not been able to reach either of them, he said.

Unidentified Democratic party "leaders" were expected to testify.

The hearings will be presided over by Advisory Master Dougal Herr.

Winthrop Bus Drivers Strike

Bus drivers of Rapid Transit, Inc., operating between Winthrop Center, Winthrop, and Maverick sq., East Boston, walked out on strike again today—but company officials at Winthrop asserted they did not know for what reason.

The first knowledge they had that a strike was on, these officials stated, was when driver after driver pulled his bus into the yard and walked away.

The strike started shortl ybefore 11 a. m., tieing up passengers, who had no notice of any dispute and who waited patiently at stops for buses that did not appear.

Perfect New Spinal Anesthesia Needle

NEW YORK, May 9 (AP)—A hollow needle with a hole in the side, near the end, instead of at the tip, was described to the Medical Society of the State of New York today as improving spinal anesthesia.

The side hole enables the anesthetist to direct the drug either up or down thes pinal column, by a turn of the needle. This gives anesthesia more exactly in the part of the body desired, and longer-lasting anesthesia.

Salem Demotes High Principal

While the Lowell school department wrestled with the problem created by reduction of the school superintendent and high school principal to teachers, the Salem school committee at a postmidnight meeting today with no spectators present demoted Principal James J. Murray of Salem High School to the grade of teacher.

The Salem action was taken without publication of charges against Murray. Mayor Edward A. Coffey, committee chairman, and Daniel Daley voted against Murray's reduction from the $3800 post.

Owen B. Kiernan, principal at Sandwich High School for five years, was named to succeed Murray, who had been headmaster at Salem since 1938. Murray's demotion and Kiernan's appointment will be effective June 30.

Kiernan was appointed on the recommendation of School Supt. Clark W. McDermith.

At Lowell, Vincent M. McCartin, demoted from superintendent to teacher, refused to surrender his office to James F. Conway, high school submaster named to succeed him at an early morning session of the committee.

McCartin signed a payroll covering Civil Service workers and the city solicitor was asked to render a ruling on legality of the payroll.

Raymond A. Sullivan, dropped from high school headmaster to teacher, also refused to give up his position to Joseph G. Pyne, submaster appointed to replace him.

Meet to Plan D-Day Prayers

Preparations for an American D-Day of prayer on the fateful date when Allied forces storm Europe from sea and air will be discussed Thursday during an executive committee meeting of the Joint Council of International Co-operation, which has organized forums in 22 Massachusetts cities and towns.

In keeping with Gov. Saltonstall's proclamation urging that all people in the state join in common prayer on D-Day, whenever it comes, it is proposed that the 22 forums hold special community meetings, open to the public, while churches conduct prayer services.

A union service will be held at the Congregational Church in West Roxbury at 8 p. m. on the day of attack.

Public to Be Barred At School Meetings

As a result of Committeeman Clement A. Norton's objection to the "silly and unbusinesslike" procedure of discussing schoolteachers' salaries at a public meeting in "a room packed with teachers," the public will be barred from today on at all future school committee discussions of the 1944-45 school budget.

The committee voted 3-2 to start its executive sessions today when one of the most controversial subjects in next year's budget — a proposed $96 increase to 1300 elementary teachers—comes up for consideration.

What 'D-Day,' 'H-Hour' Mean

By the Associated Press

The term "D-Day," now prominent in the news from Britain, is an Army expression used to refer to, but not reveal the time fixed for a military action such as an attack on a local front or the start of an invasion.

Similar verbal camouflage is "H-Hour," the exact minute for action on "D-Day." The expressions are this war's counterparts of the World War I term "zero-hour," the time when troops "went over the top" from their trenches to attack the enemy.

In discussing high strategy commanders may frequently mention "D-Day" even though all present know exactly what day is meant. Thus the secret is safe—even if the walls have ears.

State Employes Save Gas

Travel by Massachusetts state departments and employes was reduced by 2,143,316 miles and 132,164 gallons of gasoline were saved during the first three months of this year, compared with the same period in 1941 according to George J. Cronin, state purchasing agent.

Boys, 18, Ease Draft Of Men Over 26 Yrs.

WASHINGTON, May 9 (INS)—The draft pressure on men over 26 was eased further today by reports that the June calls will be sharply lower than current quotas and may be filled to a considerable extent with youths becoming 18 years of age.

Issuance of new regulations designed to clarify the status of registrants 26 to 30 and all those over 30—whose induction this year now seems unlikely — is expected Thursday following conclusion of the three-day meeting of state draft directors in Washington.

Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey raised the issue of diminishing draft calls when he expressed concern over the large number of men now in 1-A. Disclosing that there are now 2,250,000 in this category, Maj. Gen. Hershey told the opening session with the state directors:

"One of the questions selective service must decide is whether it is wise to keep so many men alerted—if one can use a military term—in view of the size of present calls."

Informed sources consider it unlikely, however, that Hershey—in announcing the new regulations Thursday—will specify any exact time limit on the deferment of men in the 26-30 group and those over 30. The new regulations probably will determine the fate of men now in 1-A.

Soldier Held In Man's Death

BROCKTON, May 9—Despite his voluntary surrender to solve a case and ease his conscience, Army Pvt. Richard Ericson, 20, North Pearl st., pleaded innocent today in district court to charges of manslaughter and assault in the death of Clarence Madan, 40, of Aledo pl.

Madan was found unconscious in the street March 10 and subsequently died. Police had closed the case, they said, in belief he had suffered his injuries in an accidental fall.

But Ericson walked into police headquarters yesterday, they stated, and said his conscience had bothered him so much he had forged a pass at Camp Edwards in order to return to Brockton and confess he had struck Madan and felled him.

According to the soldier's story, as told by police, Madan had made slurring remarks to Ericson, including one about "4-F's in uniform."

Following his not guilty pleas to the two charges, Pvt. Ericson was held in $5000 for the grand jury.

Approximately 5000 employes were eligible to vote in the election, ordered and under supervision of the National Labor Relations Board.

Results will be disclosed by the NLRB tonight, on the eve of the decision in the court fight being waged by the company and the government over seizure of the Chicago properties.

VFW Warning To Politicians

Any political party which attempts to win the 1944 election by making veteran welfare a "political football" will be denounced by organized veterans, declared Commander-in-Chief Carl J. Schoeninger of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in a message to all state headquarters today.

"Those who frame the formal platforms at the conventions should resist the temptation to bid for votes of veterans, their families and others, with vague and indefinite promises which raise false hopes among those in uniform," Schoeninger declared.

Schoening said veteran welfare legislation enacted thus far "reflects the wishes of the American people and Congress to vote for these measure without regard for political affiliations. There can be no debate over the nation's responsibility to its fighting men."

Copies of Schoeninger's statement will be distributed to all posts by State Comdr. Frank J. Benoit.

Godfrey's Life Like Air Pal's

By PAUL WHELTON AND JAMES F. McENANEY

Along a line curiously parallel to that of Capt. Don Gentile the life of Lieut. John Trevor Godfrey of Woonsocket, R. I., has run—finally to converge under the exigencies of war and lead into an exciting and colorful partnership.

Both aces are in their early 20's, within a few months of each other; both come from middle-class families whose parents emigrated to America from their native lands; both were high school athletes and both were so taken with flying that they worked outside school hours for money with which to finance their aerial ambitions.

Johnny Godfrey was born March 28, 1922, at Montreal, youngest of the four sons who blessed the union of Reginald Godfrey, native of Manchester, Eng., and his wife, Ethel, born in North Wales.

MOVE TO RHODE ISLAND

When Johnny was not quite a year old, the family moved from Montreal to North Smithfield, part of Woonsocket, where the father engaged in the rubber business. And from the age of four and a half until he was six, the boy attended a private kindergarten conducted by Mrs. William King of North Smithfield, who made it a practice to go around with her car and collect the kids each day.

Out of the kindergarten stage, Johnny moved into the public school system for his higher education in the primary, grammar, junior and senior high school grades.

During the six years he spent at Woonsocket junior and senior high schools he played clarinet in the band. He had been a boy singer in the choir of St. James' Episcopal Church; so it was only natural that he also made the school glee club with ease.

His elder brother, Lawrence, now 27 and manager of the W. T. Grant Co. store in Fitchburg (a son, christened last Easter Sunday, was named Reginald for the torpedoed brother) had been the first playing-manager of the high school football team.

PLAYED RIGHT GUARD

"Long Johnny" Godfrey, then swiftly rising toward his present altitude of 6 feet 1½ inches, became the second playing-manager in the school's history and during the autumns of 1938 and 1939 accredited himself nobly at right guard.

It was during high school days that he became interested in aviation and flying. Like many other boys he took to building model airplanes and experimenting with them, but he wanted more that that.

He had his music lessons, he was playing football and at the same time acting as student manager of the team; he was in the school band and on the glee club and, of course had to attend rehearsals.

Nevertheless, Johnny squeezed out an hour here and an hour there to do odd jobs for neighbors in the North Smithfield district—any odd jobs—so that he could earn at least one dollar during the week. Then, on Sundays, he would thumb his way over to Hillsgrove airport, now the Providence municipal airport, and spend his buck for a brief ride aloft.

Young Johnny Godfrey wasn't interested in the scenic end of these hard-won flights. Throughout the ride in the light cabin plane he kept his eyes attentively upon what the pilot was doing.

HIGH SCHOOL OVER

Meanwhile, Hitler had launched the all-out war for which the Nazis in Germany had been building through the years and Johnny's high school days came to an end in due course. He had been elected president of his 1940 class and he directed the class activities into June—and then, suddenly, it was all over.

After graduation he got a job as a checker when workmen were employed in constructing a new naval air station at Quonset Point, R. I. He had more money then with which to fly and he became keener and keener to train as a pilot.

JOHNNY GODFREY AT 12
Before Aviation Bug Bit Him

The war was moving on. France had fallen even as Johnny was graduated; the Nazis were fanning out and spreading their slimy tentacles all over Europe. The London blitz raged and the Luftwaffe finally turned back, licking its wounds. The American draft was inaugurated for the second time in less than a quarter-century.

The year 1940 faded and 1941 arrived. In March, Johnny Godfrey turned 19 years, and with that milestone there came a stronger urge to get into military service, because Johnny felt that America would be in the war and he wished to be part of it—in the air, at the stick of a fighter plane.

REJECTED BY U. S.

His ex-schoolmate and closest pal was Joe Cavedon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cavedon of Woonsocket, and the two youths talked it over. It was the Air Service for them. Flying cadets were being enlisted by the Army but when the chums attempted to join they were rejected under that peculiar ruling of American officials which undoubtedly lost hundreds of natural pilots to the forces.

Johnny and Joe didn't have the required two years of college. They turned away, bitter in the thought that a red-blooded youth needed to know Latin and Greek and breathe the rarified air of an English literature class in order to fly a plane and squirt machine guns at the enemy.

Just 10 months prior to their disappointing experience another youth, a year older, had been torn by a similar bitter experience. He, too, had been rejected by the high American air brains because he had not gone to college.

This lad's name was Don S. Gentile. He was a chisel-jawed Piqua, O., ex-high school football player who had been flying for months. But he hadn't gone to college.

(Follow the adventures of Lieut. John T. Godfrey, Yankee flying ace, in tomorrow's Boston American.)

Medford Boys, Parents United

A few hours after they were found by a state trooper at Franklin, N. H., two young Medford boys for whom 300 searchers had combed the Middlesex Fells area in Medford since Saturday, were reunited today with their parents.

They are Charles Ritson, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ritson, of Sheridan ave., and Warren MacDonald, 11, son of Pvt. and Mrs. William MacDonald, of Salem st.

A third boy, Thomas Ritson, Jr., older brother of Charles, who has been gone since last Thursday, was not with them. The two boys said they believed he had gone to New York. He had borrowed $20 from his brother, Melvin, just before he disappeared.

Forest Fires Set, Officials Believe

Some of the recent forest fires in Massachusetts were deliberately set and this year's record is much worse than last year's, according to Raymond J. Kennby, state conservation commissioner.

The two factors principally responsible for the increase in forest fires according to the commissioner are a much drier season than last year and an "immeasurably worse" manpower situation.

Tarawa 'Luxury' Myth, Says Sailor

Pictures and an article in the April 17th issue of a national weekly magazine, depicting Uncle Sam's warriors swimming and playing tennis with nurses at Tarawa, are grossly misleading, it was asserted today in a letter to the Boston American by a Cambridge Navy man stationed there.

Aviation Radioman 2/c Daniel J. Sicard, 19, of Prince st., Cambridge, who took part in the bloody battle, said he and his associates have not only been aghored but urged by their commanding officers to write home and correct the impression that Tarawa is now a South Pacific paradise.

D. J. Sicard

Of the magazine article "Tarawa Revisited," the young sailor, already a veteran of two years of war, wrote:

"Of all the pictures presented in ——— (the magazine), there was only one single, solitary picture taken on the island Betio, where the actual battle was fought. All other pictures were taken on other islands of the atoll and these were not even touched by the battle.

(An atoll is an island, more frequently a group of islands, upthrust from a coral reef and surrounding a lagoon.—Editor's note.)

JUST ISN'T DONE

"As for swimming or playing tennis with nurses, it just isn't done on this island. We have never had any native women dance for us. Men have danced for us. They were from the labor corps.

"At different points you can see amphibious tanks and other landing craft that didn't make the beach or were knocked out as they reached their goal. You can also find demolished Jap trucks, broken tanks, field pieces, boilers, pipes, steel rods, concrete and cocoanut logs—all mixed up in wild scrap heaps.

OH, QUITE DIFFERENT!

"In most of the pictures I have seen there have been big, beautiful palm trees everywhere. On Betio it is quite different. There isn't one square foot of this island shaded by palm trees. During the battle most of the trees were knocked flat and those that were not had the tops blasted off of them.

"Betio island has decidedly improved in the past few months, that is, in comparison with conditions as they were in the beginning. However, it is still far from being a tropical island paradise. We do not have swimming, tennis courts or clubs. We do have an open-air theater. The pictures are old but we get enjoyment out of them.

"We are not looking for sympathy or anything else. It is just that we want the people back home to know the truth. The average person has no idea of what it is like here, so they can easily believe any picture they see."

Young Sicard enlisted at the age of 17 with his parents' consent. His mother is Mrs. Mary R. Sicard of Prince st., and two of his regular correspondents are his sisters, Ruth and Marie.

List Georgia Negro Votes Over Threat

ATLANTA, May 9 (AP)—A city detective and the sheriff questioned him and a police lieutenant threatened arrest, said an aged, Harvard-educated Negro today, but he "kept at it" six weeks helping Negroes to register as they sought voting rights for Georgia's July 4 Democratic primary.

By his own count, George A. Towns, retired Atlanta University professor, influenced at least 1000 Negroes to register at the Fulton County courthouse before the deadline fell last night.

"Some people thought I must have an ulterior motive," recalled the spare, bespectacled Negro. "A city detective came and questioned me to find out my source of income. He thought I was soliciting. I told him I didn't need much to live on and what I needed I had.

"Then the sheriff came and got me and questioned me. I told him I was just a retired professor, trying to help some of my people exercise their obligations as citizens. I told him if they didn't want the Negro to participate in his government, they ought not to take his taxes. The sheriff got up and left and never came back.

"A police lieutenant came down and threatened to arrest me. I told him I would be there when he came for me, but he never did."

Negroes began registering by scores here and throughout Georgia soon after the U. S. Supreme Court decision that members of their race were eligible to vote in the Texas Democratic primary.

Court to Decide Reardon Row

The dispute between Ulysses J. Lupien, state civil service director, and the Boston school committee over the committee's appointment of James S. Reardon, brother-in-law of its chairman, Dr. Patrick J. Foley, to the $6000 schoolhouse custodian post, was headed for the courts today.

After Lupien issued an order stopping Reardon's pay, Foley announced "we will let the Supreme Court decide the issue." Foley contended that a schoolhouse custodian is a member of the school department and not subject to civil service. The committee chairman said the late Francis X. Nagle, former custodian, was appointed and verified after a non-competitive examination.

The civil service head charged the school committee acted without authority in announcing that an examination for the schoolhouse custodian post had been called off. "That examination will be held as scheduled on June 10," Lupien announced.

Acute Syphilis Cured in 48 Hrs.

NEW YORK, May 9 (AP)—Cures of more than 90 per cent of acute syphilis cases by combined artificial fever and arsenic in less than 48 hours was reported to the medical society of the state of New York today.

The report was made by Dr. Nathaniel Jones, of Jacksonville, Fla.

He said that the fever intensifies the effects of the arsenic, which is given in the form of mepharsen. Three methods of combining the two treatments were tried. In the one that worked best, mepharsen was given the night before fever; then next day five hours of fever up to 106 degrees Fahrenheit; and afterward more mepharsen. This arsenic was given intravenously.

Firms Out to Top Salvage Record

Scores of firms in Boston's wholesale shoe and leather district sought today to exceed the record-breaking salvage mark set by the retail stores and dry goods area in the office waste paper collection drive.

All previous collection totals were topped in the downtown dry goods and retail store area as trucks carried away ton upon ton of obsolete records, pamphlets, catalogues, letters and old invoices retrieved from office files.

George C. Wiswell, general chairman of the drive, which is being conducted by the Advertising Club of Boston, lauded the merchants and business men for their enthusiastic response.

Every business place from Kingston st. between Summer and Essex sts. and from Rowe pl. made big donations, he said.

George G. Hyland, chairman of the Boston salvage committee, urged business concerns that have been depositing empty cartons in the waste paper bins on sidewalks throughout the downtown area to flatten the cartons, as otherwise they quickly clog the bins and make it hard for other contributors to find room.

Churchill X-Ray Thrills Sergeant

PHILADELPHIA, May 9 (AP)—Sergt. Louis McGlinsey knew he was going to take X-ray pictures of a "big shot" but he didn't know who the "big shot" was.

He wrote to his parents here that "there were British guards everywhere" and when the doctor opened the door, there was Prime Minister Churchill "sleeping in bed, as big as life." McGlinsey related:

"He wore black bands over his eyes, so he could sleep in the daytime. We were all nervous and my knees were playing a tune. I asked Mr. Churchill to take off his undershirt, and with no answer, off it came.

"He had that big black cigar in his mouth. This is the truth. He wanted to know if he could have his picture taken with it in his mouth, and of course we said 'No'."

House Out to Kill Amended GI Bill

By FRANK REILLY
Boston American Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 9—Increasing numbers of congressmen today joined in support of a move to reject Chairman John E. Rankin's House committee version of the "G-I bill of rights" when it comes up for debate Thursday and, instead, to substitute for it the original bill as passed by the Senate.

Started in the House, where 30 percent of the members are Legionnaires, the move is particularly aimed at restoring the 52 weeks of unemployment compensation provided in the original American omnibus bill. The House committee cut this in half, to 26 weeks.

Also supporters of the original measure wish to strip the rehabilitation program of all minor amendments tacked on by the committee. They would substitute something as near like the bill passed by the Senate as possible.

This would eliminate the necessity of sending the bill to a conference committee, and result in its being passed and on its way to the President by next week.

Whether the move will meet with success was considered questionable, but it is definitely known it would have the support of Majority Leader John W. McCormack and Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, both from Massachusetts.

McCormack and Martin are in favor of 52 weeks' unemployment compensation for veterans.

On the other hand there will be an element, particularly of Southern Congressmen and those from farming districts of the West, who will fight for the 26 weeks of unemployment compensation.

Congressmen from industrial sections, who fear a depression of some sort after the war, will go along in support of the 52 weeks of unemployment compensation.

Another quiet movement was under way to bring the bill out under closed rule with the intent to shut off amendments and confine the House debate to the real purpose of the measure.

Many House members have very definite views concerning veterans' rehabilitation, some of them considerably far-fetched, and under open rule they could drag out the debate for days.

Fight to Finish In Loom Strike

FALL RIVER, May 9—Immediate action by at least two federal agencies was expected here today following the "fight to a finish" answer to a War Labor Board order by independent craft workers at the Arkwright Mills who voted to continue their 26-day strike.

Refusal of 90 independent loomfixers, slasher tenders and knot tiers to return to work as the WLB directed, was announced by Romeo Lachapelle, union vice-president. He said the craftsmen's walkout was caused by a day's layoff from work of a loomfixer because of an altercation with a CIO weaver.

As a result of the independent union's action, members of the CIO workers' union at the plant voted immediately to seek permission from the War Manpower Commission for release to work elsewhere.

Bay Staters Meet AEF Pals Via Book

By GRAHAM HOVEY

NAPLES, May 9 (INS)—Up on the third floor of the big white building on the Via San Felice today, I found the truly great books on war—books that deal with the terribly vital subjects of war as the things an American soldier a long way from home thinks about; the emotions he experienced; his hopes; plans and fears.

The big white building houses the American Red Cross Enlisted Men's Club. The books in the "Sky Room" on the third floor are where soldiers visiting the club register their names and home towns. In theory, that is, actually, man of them register other things in those volumes.

You can trace the evolution of reunions and miniature "old home weeks" inside the covers of nearly all the state books.

When Pvt. Raymond Fisher of Templeton registered in the Massachusetts book, he probably was a lonely soldier, but his morale was speedily improved. An arrow pointing to his name has its origin at a spot where Corp. Reginald Aldrich, also of Templeton, signed up and noted, "Howdy, Raymond Fisher, this is Reginald Aldrich." And it may have been a "threesome" evenually, for a little lower on the same page is the signature of Bill Strout of Baldwinsville, Mass., with the notation, "Hi, Aldrich, I went to Templeton high with you."

"Where in hell are the fellows from Melrose, Mass.?" demanded Sergt. Freeman Pearl of that Bay State town. "That's what I want to know," asserted Sergt. Webster Benedict, a fellow townsman, in purple ink.

Pvt. Warren Kecy of Lowell, Mass., wrote, "Look me up, someone; I've been here since Oct. 6 and haven't met anyone."

Pvt. Lewis Heirtzler of Worcester pleads, "Look me up, fellows," and Sergt. Russell H. Andrews of Cambridge adds hopefully, "I was always around the F. J. Lynch pool room."

On thee heerful side, Pvt. Frank Bruzzi of Pitsfield, Mass., messaged Pvt. Edward J. Fassell of Hinsdale, "Hi, Ed, I'll meet you."

Sees Blockade Hit Nazis Hard

LONDON, May 9 (AP)—Lord Selborne, British minister of economic warfare told the House of Lords today the effective ness of the Allied blockade of Germany was by now "undoubtedly very great."

"I am not going to suggest Germany will collapse because she runs short of this or that commodity," he said. "But German stocks are seriously depleted, submarine blockade runners can do little to replenish them, the neutrals are increasingly aloof and air raids creat fresh problems which every day are harder to solve."

Combat Flying Grim Business, Says Bong

By MAJ. RICHARD I. BONG

Leading American Ace in the Pacific War Theater

Distributed by International News Service. Copyright, 1944, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

ADVANCED FIGHTER BASE, New Guinea, May 9 (INS)—Anyone who regards the wartime profession of being a fighter pilot as even remotely glamorous should have spent a month with us in New Guinea when, as the older men in this theater describe it, the "going was plenty rough."

The going was rough then and it is just as rough now for the combat pilot and his crew. It's a grim and tiresome profession, relieved only occasionally by a really good scrap.

I don't believe anyone not in the fighting game himself can fully appreciate the strain of waiting or the feeling you have when days and weeks go by without combat.

CAMP POOR ONE

When we first moved to our base on the north coast of New Guinea, our problem was typical of nearly every fighter group here. We camped in the jungle—utilizing it as camouflage—and our camp was a poor one at best. We didn't have fresh meat for nearly four months.

We weren't getting into any scraps at the beginning because the Japs were kind of retrenching after getting whipped during the Buna campaign.

But they were pulling night harassing raids and those are a lot worse on the nerves than a big daylight attack.

Some of our personnel were killed in the Nips' night visits. We had a squadron commander at the time, though, who was one of the most outstanding leaders I've ever known. His name was Maj. Sid Woods of Tucson, Ariz., and he was made for the job of Squadron C. O.

The first thing he did was to get the officers and enlisted men together for a party you could have heard any place in the base. That left off a big amount of excess steam.

Then the fighting began. Attack bombers moved into our base and we were out almost every day on escort missions and began running patrols up over Lae and Salamaua.

From then on, we didn't have any more morale trouble.

NEARLY KICKED OUT

I didn't have much inclination for fighting when I first joined the Air Force. I just wanted to be a pilot and I knew the Air Force was the place to go to learn how. When the war came, though, I guess I began to be as eager as the next fellow to get into it myself.

I almost became eligible for the draft while I was waiting for orders to go overseas—and that was the first time I met General Kenney (Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, now Allied air chief in the Southwest Pacific).

We were finishing our training in Lightnings at Hamilton Field—"we" were Lieut. John O'Neill of Gasport, N. Y., and myself—and we were out cutting up in the air one day.

O'Neill got hauled up before the Hamilton commandant for flying under San Francisco's Golden Gate bridge. They nabbed me because I "buzzed" (flying low at high speed) over a friend's house in San Anselmo.

General Kenney called for us and we went to San Francisco to see him—he was commanding general of the Fourth Air Force then.

Well, he gave us quite a lecture on the subject but admitted he went under the East Brooklyn bridge the day he won his own wings.

He sent us back to Hamilton Field with orders to write a 500-word thesis on safe flying. Then we had to stand up and read the thesis to the entire squadron. That was a good cure.

However, no one talks a great deal about the "safety factor" in flying in New Guinea. One thing we do talk a lot about, though, is the factor of teamwork.

I think that's the whole secret of our success and I am only glad that the San Anselmo incident didn't kick me off the team before as really on it.

LOSSE GO DOWN

There were any number of individual stars when we first came over, but collectively we hadn't gotten together yet. Soon as we did and worked out squadron tactics instead of individual tactics, our losses went down and the Jap losses up. We are fighting that way now and the results are getting better all the time.

I have a good score because I have had contact with the Nips and because working as a team my flight have given me every chance to knock off Japs.

(Tomorrow: A head-on encounter with a Jap pilot—and a narrow escape from "curtains.")

Women to Rule Ward Democrats

Perhaps women politicians should heed the adage, "Let well enough alone."

During the recent election, an all-female slate of candidates for posts on the Ward 20 Democratic committee, in Roslindale and West Roxbury, won seven of the 10 committee seats and soundly trounced the "regular" slate of candidates put up by Ward Chairman Francis A. Flanagan.

However, Mrs. Margaret E. Kilduff, head of the female slate, requested a recount, with the unexpected result that her group lost two places. The losers were Doris E. Carroll and either Mary A. Sannell to Gertrude M. McGowan, tied for 10th place. One of the latter will be selected by the committee.

But if all the women on the committee vote together, they'll run things in Ward 20, because one of the Flanagan ticket members who won, by virtue of the recount, was a member of the fair sex, Miss Rose F. Healy.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

"Hey, Pap, whyn't you tell me you leveled off the old hill?"

Hannegan Hurls F.D. Hat in, Farley Silent

NEW YORK, May 9 (AP)—Robert E. Hannegan, chairman of the Democratic national committee, predicted flatly last night President Roosevelt would be renominated for a fourth term and he left no doubt he considered Gov. Thomas E. Dewey the likely Republican nominee.

The prediction was uttered in the presence of James A. Farley, former national chairman, who is known to be opposed to a fourth term as he was to a third. Farley gave no indication of what stand he would take.

Hannegan, Farley and Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky spoke at one of the biggest Democratic pow-wows of the year in New York—the annual Thomas Jefferson $50-a-plate dinner at the Hotel Commodore. Nearly 1000 attended.

National Chairman Hannegan, besides expressing a personal belief that the President "will complete the assignment which destiny has given him," criticized Gov. Dewey at length.

Farley got a standing ovation when he opened the speech-making. He praised Hannegan and Barkley, but said nothing about the President.

Hannegan's prediction that the President would run again brought applause. Farley reached for a glass of water.

Hannegan said that Dewey criticized in 1940 the Administration's recognition of Soviet Russia, but only recently called for close cooperation between the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China.

He said also that Dewey had attempted to show four years ago that this nation could not produce 50,000 airplanes. Now, Hannegan said, "America has produced for the armed forces 184,000 planes, and we have an air force of 2,385,000 fighting men."

Barkley referred to Dewey as "a coy, demure, unannounced, but palpitating candidate for president."

Battle for GOP Control Holds West Va. Spotlight

By the Associated Press

A battle for control of the Republican party organization in West Virginia, indirectly involving some delegate candidates who have announced support of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York for the presidential nomination, added heat to a torrid primary election in that state today.

Chief protagonists were Raymond J. Funkhouser, wealthy Charlestown manufacturer, who is one of the three candidates for the GOP gubernatorial nomination and Walter S. Hallanan, national committeeman and chairman of the national convention arrangements committee.

Dewey's principal known adversary for the Republican presidential nomination, Gov. Bricker, picked up 50 pledged delegates in Ohio today while Democratic voters of that state were choosing a delegation which will cast 52 votes in support of a fourth term nomination. This gives Bricker 56 delegates compared with 261 thus far for Dewey.

In Missouri, the Democratic state convention yesterday instructed its 32 delegates to vote as a unit for a fourth term nomination.

In Wyoming, both Democrats and Republicans selected uninstructed delegations for their national conventions but the Democrats adopted a resolution pledging support to Mr. Roosevelt should he decide to become a candidate.

Corcoran Seen in U. S. Senate Race

With the deadline for filing nomination papers one week away, Massachusetts Democratic leaders today were reported ready to announce the name of a "strong candidate" for U. S. senator, possibly Mayor John H. Corcoran of Cambridge.

Associates of Mayor Corcoran obtained nomination blanks shortly after Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald challenged party heads to display qualities of leadership and to offer a worthy candidate for the senatorship.

Fitzgerald's plea stirred up unusual behind-the-scenes activity, with the result that several possible candidates are being mentioned in addition to Mayor Corcoran. Among these are Ex-Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston; Joseph Lee, former Boston school committeeman; Internal Revenue Collector Denis W. Delaney, and former State Sen Joseph A. Langone, Jr.

Peas-Eggs Combine In Choice Dishes

By MARTHA LEE

THERE ARE NO POINTS needed now for canned peas, and it is a good time to use them quite liberally. There are also plenty of eggs in the market, and these two foods that are so rich in protein, minerals, and other food factors might well become the foundation for some hearty protein dishes that would reduce the need for so much meat.

Hard-cooked eggs and peas blend well and they might be creamed together and served over baked potato, boiled rice, or over Spanish rice, toast, corn bread or fried egg plant. These are only a few of the many ways that just that one combination may be used. Use the liquid from the canned peas in making the sauce. It contains some of the water soluble nutrients, and recent research has proved that quite a little of the vitamin B-1 is in the liquid part of the canned vegetable.

SPANISH RICE

¼ cup salad oil 1 tsp. salt
1 clove garlic, peeled
1 medium-sized onion, minced
¼ cup chopped green pepper
3 cups boiled rice
2½ cups canned tomatoes

Heat salad oil in large frying pan. Add garlic, onion, green pepper, and rice, and cook 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Add salt and tomatoes. Mix well, cover, and cook over low heat until tomato juice is absorbed, about 15 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Hard-cooked eggs and peas make the foundation for hearty luncheon or supper salads. Combine them with celery, green pepper, shredded carrots, or with canned salmon or tuna.

If you can get cottage cheese, serve it on lettuce, with deviled eggs and a spoonful or so of canned peas that have been mixed with a well seasoned French dressing. Pour a little French dressing over the cheese and lettuce.

DEVILED EGGS

6 hard-cooked eggs ¼ tsp. salt
5 tbsp. mayonnaise
2 tsp. finely minced onion
2 tbsp. finely minced pickles and olives
¼ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce

Cut hard-cooked eggs in halves lengthwise. Remove yolks and force through sieve. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Add more mayonnaise if needed. Refill whites with yolk mixture. Chill and serve garnished with lettuce or watercress. Sprinkle with paprika if desired. Makes 6 deviled eggs.

Gelatin salads are convenient to have in the refrigerator to use for the first warm days that come along. Again use the hard cooked eggs and canned peas, but combine them with a well seasoned gelatin mixture, such as one you might make with tomato juice or bouillon. It would be well to add some crisp vegetable to the mixture, such as sliced radishes, celery, green onions or shredded carrots.

GELATIN BASE FOR SALADS

1 tbsp. gelatin
1¾ cups bouillon or soup stock, well seasoned
2 tsp. grated onion

Soften the gelatin in ¼ cup of the cold bouillon or soup stock. Heat the remaining stock to boiling; add softened gelatin and stir until dissolved; add grated onion or other desired seasonings; fold in vegetables and sliced eggs when gelatin starts to stiffen.

JELLIED TOMATO SALAD

4 cups tomato juice
Herbs and spices to taste
2 tbsp. gelatin 2 tsp. salt
¼ cup cold water 2 tsp. sugar
2 tbsp. lemon juice

Heat the tomato juice with herbs and spices (such as bay leaf, peppercorns, whole cloves, celery top, sprig of parsley); cover and simmer 10 minutes; strain. Soften the gelatin in cold water; add to this the hot tomato juice (there should be about 3½ cups). Stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add salt, sugar, lemon juice. Add vegetables when gelatin starts to stiffen. (If vegetables and sliced eggs are to be added to this salad, use only ½ the recipe.) Turn into large or individual molds first rinsed in cold water; chill until firm.

Beauty

Glorify Arms, Elbows

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

FASHION HAS GONE NUDIST this season . . . not alarmingly so . . . just modestly so . . . for it is merely your arms that will be bare. Yes, bare-armed frocks are the biggest news today . . . whether it's a cape-sleeved daytime dress or a sleeveless dinner frock . . . you will be seeing plenty of bare . . . but definitely feminine arms morning, noon and night.

This presents a rather unique beauty problem to the American girl . . . one she has formerly not been particularly concerned about . . . despite the fact that arms and elbows have been sorely neglected parts of the female anatomy for time on end.

IF YOU'RE GOING modestly nude this summer . . . in keeping with style trends . . . be sure your arms and elbows don't spoil the bare look you're trying to achieve. Most neglected parts of the anatomy in the past . . . arms and elbows must come in for some definite glorification if a beauty-minded girl wants to look the part. Paramount Starlet Noel Neill can well be proud of her skin . . . so smooth and lovely and feminine.

But this season . . . if a girl is at all conscious about her good looks . . . she must look to her arms and elbows to be dramatically perfect for the hot-weather fashions. And a noted beautician . . . cognizant of this vital need . . . because she is as practical as she is dramatic . . . comes to our rescue with a simple 1-2-3 treatment.

If you have coarsened, roughened elbows and scaly upper arms . . . if your arms are flabby and need firming . . . if they are not as lovely to look at as your face . . . this simply 1-2-3 treatment is a quick solution. For in the local salon this nationally known beautician . . . not only can you purchase the cosmetics to make your arms and elbows glamorously beautiful . . . you learn from her consultant some exercises to firm and mould sagging, flabby flesh. Repetition at home of these exercises demonstrated by the salon consultant will help you remedy this condition.

USE THEM AT HOME

Here's the home program:

First scrub your arms with a skinsmooth cream . . . applied by a soft nail brush or coarse washcloth to remove the dried, discolored skin cuticle . . . "dead skin" as it is most commonly called . . . and you'll reveal a smooth, fine-textured under-skin.

Then massage . . . to firm and strengthen the arm muscles as well as soften and lubricate the skin surface . . . as you knead, mould and stroke the full length of the arms with a pine oil cream . . . a delightfully rich, creamy emollient that is almost good enough to eat.

The final phillip includes the patting into the skin of a cool astringent and a soothing lotion that will give that desired satin-smooth finish . . . not only to your arms and elbows but to your hands . . . if you gently massage finger by finger in the same manner.

For the names of these arm and elbow glorifiers, phone the Beauty Dept., LIBerty 4000, or write me, care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ex-Doormat Wife's Advice

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I want to give a little friendly advice to D. S. whom you called doormat type of wife. As she wrote you, everyone thought her husband charming. It was the same with my husband. His good looks, outward appearance camouflaged his cruelty.

I went to the Legal Aid, when I could no longer stand his treatment. They gave me excellent advice. I rented a room and got a job. I suggest that your correspondent do the same thing. She can then decide whether she wants to leave her husband, or if, like mine, he will be cured by getting a good scare.

Mine did get a good scare and when I returned to him he realized he had to control his temper and his hands. I came back, and he has continued to behave like a human being.

EX-DOORMAT WIFE.

Men of sub-human type who beat and abuse their wives are often brought to a realization of their behavior through a cowardly fear of what the neighbors will think of them. And the neighbors always know. The good-scare treatment works sometimes, not because the man has become more humane but because he hates to have the neighbors realize what a brute he is in his own home.

Unfortunately the treatment isn't always practical, when there are children to be considered.

Formal Wedding

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: I am 23 years old, unmarried, but planning to be married in June to a widower several years older than I am. Since we both have many friends and my finance holds an important position, we would like to have a large, formal church wedding followed by a large reception. Is it proper for me to have such an elaborate wedding, since I am marrying a widower? I realize that a widow should have a simple wedding, but I'm not sure if this applies to a widower. Does it? R. W.

No, a girl who has never been married may have as formal and elaborate a wedding as she wishes, whether she marries a bachelor or a widower. The only difference in details is that the widower does not give a "bachelor" dinner.

Patriotic Motif in Dresses

By BETTINA BEDWELL

THE patriotic motif is bound to flourish on the styles during these times when our minds are full of the momentous events of the war. And I have just seen it used in a most attractive way to make decorations on a crocheted sweater and skirt dress.

Tiny crossed flags of the allied nations are set in irregular patterns over the front of the hip-length sweater blouse, as you can see by looking at our sketch. This dress comes from Henry a la Pensee, and is crocheted from very narrow taffeta ribbon.

One of the crossed flags in each design is made of silk and loose from its embroidered pole, so it flies in any breeze. The other flag that makes a pair is embroidered onto the dress. A turnover collar open at the back finishes the high round neck of this sweater.

My Day

By Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK, Monday — At 1:30 Sunday afternoon, I went to the new School for Social Research to speak at a luncheon meeting held jointly by the International Student Assembly and the United States Student Assembly. Both organizations have held very successful two-day conventions and were closing in the afternoon.

The International Student Assembly was formed a year ago last September at a meeting in Washington, held under the auspices of the United States branch of the International Student Service. Later, the International Student Service, while retaining a skeleton organization, gave up its work, feeling that too many young people would be in the armed forces to make working with them as students feasible or important. The young people themselves seemed to feel differently, and the international group continued to work.

★ ★ ★

THE UNITED STATES STUDENT ASSEMBLY, which also decided to continue working in this country, has made some rather notable advances. Most important, I think, is the way the young people, with very limited assistance from a few older people, have increased participation in college groups. They have held several interesting meetings at which they obtained good speakers, and from which the young people have gained valuable knowledge and inspiration.

Do Americans Take War Seriously Enough?

ACCORDING to Dr. Gallup's latest poll, two-thirds of the American people are convinced that "most people in this country do not take the war seriously enough."

That is too anomalous a statement to be easily digested. When we went to school "two-thirds of the people" and "most people" were more or less synonymous.

So, if Dr. Gallup's findings are correct, there must be a lot of guilty consciences in our midst.

Or, possibly, many of the men and women who talked to the good doctor's investigators were like the self-satisfied Scotsman who told his wife:

"All the world's crazy, save you and me. And sometimes I think you are a little peculiar."

Our belief is that the war is a very serious thing with most people.

The twenty million fathers and mothers who have given sons and daughters to the armed services are rarely complacent.

Their smiles may be as bright as the service flags in their windows, but deep down in their hearts lurks a constant fear of seeing a casualty list with a cherished name upon it.

The millions of young wives and girl mothers who are bravely carrying on with restricted budgets and striving mightily to preserve homes and families are hardly having a picnic in their husbands' absence.

In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find any large group of Americans who have escaped the war's harmful effects. Not everyone has suffered as much as his neighbor, but everyone has suffered in some respect.

Even the 4-F lad who does not expect ever to see a battlefield cannot wholly escape the humiliation of having been officially branded unfit.

Public morale is not helped by the tendency of too many persons to accuse other persons of being high-hearted and light-headed in the darkest hour of United States history.

Better would be a sympathetic regard for the sober, resolute and sacrificial qualities that lie behind the cheerful, hopeful mask of contemporary American life.

Crepe-hangers do not win wars. Neither do persons who emulate crepe-hangers.

Etiquette in Schools

MRS. EMILY POST, distinguished etiquette authority, thinks there should be more gentlemen and fewer ruffians in public schools.

Mrs. Post recently placed her graceful self on record as saying that good manners should rank with history and mathematics.

This should have distinct advantages. A pleasant personality and a gracious bearing are always helpful to a success-seeking youngster.

But it might have disadvantages, too.

Imagine the parental blushes when 7-year-old Johnny placed the right fork back on the right plate and opined in cultivated accents:

"Your etiquette is atrocious, Father. USE, don't wear, your napkin."

Religious Book Week

RELIGIOUS BOOK WEEK has opened at the Boston Public Library with inspiring addresses by a minister, a priest and a rabbi.

The great treasury of knowledge and learning could not render a better or more necessary public service. Persons of all faiths and creeds need good books, truthful books, constructive books.

We hope every Bostonian will obtain a religious book before Sunday and read it. That would be an effective way of informing the pedlars of literary filth and corruption that the most enlightened city of the country knows how to combat their evil influence.

Washington Scene . . .

WASHINGTON, May 9—My undercover agent in Chicago has just forwarded the intelligence that the FBI men out there are very provoked with Atty. Gen. Francis Biddle for ordering them into the government - seized Montgomery Ward & Co. plant.

Twenty G-Men have been assigned to Montgomery Ward's. Their principal duty—so far as they have been able to ascertain—is to prowl around the plant and see that nobody swipes, or removes, any of the government posters.

They nabbed one official of the company in the act of committing this hideous offense and speedily brought him to book.

The official said he was merely takinig the poster to his office to study it, but you can't fool Attorney General Biddle.

THE G-men at Montgomery Ward's take the obviously unreasonable attitude that they have more important, more urgent, things to do than poster-guarding. They have a ridiculous idea that they ought to be out on the job elsewhere tracking down saboteurs, and others trying to impede the war effort.

They seem to think that the Montgomery Ward thing is a local problem which could be adequately handled by the Chicago police. Furthermore, they feel they are too shorthanded anyhow. While they are keeping eagle eyes on the posters, cases are piling up on them; many of which they fear will not—or anyway, should not—wait.

Of course, the G-men are not saying these things out loud to every bystander. One of the first things you learn in the FBI is that making cracks about the Attorney-General is not the surest way to promotion!

EVERY AGE has produced its prophets and soothsayers. Many came up with the right answers and achieved lasting renown. But others miscalculated, or got a bum premonition somehow, and didn't fare so good.

In fact it used to be no particularly uncommon sight to see a fellow walking around without his ears, or maybe his nose, and when someone would ask how these facial accessories came to be missing, answer would be forthcoming as follows:

"Oh, he is a prophet (or possibly sage, astrologer, oracle, hermit, haruspice or necromancer) who gave the king a four-ball prophecy. His Majesty does not like to be given wrong answers and did this fretwork on the fellow's kisser to teach him to be right in future."

When I was a kid, just before second Bull Run, the prophet I liked best was Joseph, the gaily-coated fellow who got sold down river into Egypt. My father used to read to me about Joseph and I would listen entranced to the unfolding of how he told Pharoah (Genesis 41: 25-36) that a seven-year famine was coming after seven years of abundance.

To me, the prophecy was the most exciting part of the story of Joseph. I was not yet old enough to get anything out of the tale of Potiphar's wife (Genesis 39: 7-18). I thought it slowed up the rest of the narrative, and how times have changed.

Since Joseph there have been many foretellers, including a bearded gentleman named Nostradamus, who got a lot of free plugging in the movie shorts. I don't mind admitting that I probably never would have heard of Nostradamus except for my thriftiness in always shopping around for double features.

God grant that I may see the joke of things,
The little things that bother now and then.
God grant my sense of humor may be strong,
To weep a bit and then to smile again.
God grant there'll be a chuckle in each tear,
To every trial, God, grant a funny half,
So when I'm being judged perhaps you'll say
"Are you the soul who always tries to laugh?"

THE AUTHOR of the above is 10 years of age. She wrote the poem to cheer up her father when he was in the hospital. Jacqueline is a Brooklyn girl. Her brilliancy substantiates the claim of this department that the beautiful city of Brooklyn has considerable Quiz Kid material. I believe a team of five Brooklyn youngsters could defeat an equal number of children from any city in an intelligence and information test match . . . It is about time we did some checking on the innumerable gadgets claimed to increase gasoline mileage. Who among the subscribers has a gadget that has been responsible for more miles per gallon of gasoline? I note one gadget is sponsored by a famous banking firm. It must have something. This gadget is reported able to use kerosene for power . . . Renee De Marco is reported suing a Chicago beauty shop for $50,000. Renee is said to claim she was burned through carelessness. There seem to be quite a few beauty shop casualties. Perhaps more beauty shop patrons should take out accident insurance.

ALMOST CONFIDENTIAL: In most war plants the graveyard shift has by far the best and most dependable workers. The swing shift has the slowest and most flighty workers . . . Note it stated the "three most popular sports figures of all time" are Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey and Jim Thorpe. Not in my book. My three favorites are Hans Wagner, Harry Greb and George Gipp . . . Three claims as to heredity which checking substantiates are that sons resemble their maternal uncles, the older the parents at time of birth the smarter the child and red-haired parents usually have red-haired children.

QUERIES FROM CLIENTS: Q. Was it Blanche Ring or Emma Carus who popularized the song "He's a Cousin of Mine"? A. Neither. Blanche Ring popularized "I've Got Rings on My Fingers." Emma Carus introduced "Under the Bamboo Tree." Q. Can your Mules & Men Department explain why men are such fickle buzzards? I know an Army officer who swore to a WAC he would love her until the sands of the desert grew cold. And so what? The very next week he married a WAVE. A. Our Mules & Men Department cannot successfully deny what you claim as to the fickleness of the male sex. All we can do is quote the warning of that great Mules & Men expert, William Shakespeare:

Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more;
Men were deceivers ever;
One foot in sea and one on shore,
To one thing constant never;
Then sigh not so, but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny:
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into Hey Nonny, Nonny.

NEW YORK, May 9—These foolish things keep running through my head: Mickey Rooney looks like a "before" in a hair slickum ad to me . . . odd, how so much money is spent on huge stop-and-go signs, but pedestrians jaywalk right through them . . . wonder how many people you see at Broadway and 44th st. are really in a hurry and how many are just hurrying anyway? . . . seems to be a real dearth of drunks in the night clubs these evenings. Carrie Chapman Catt would be happy to hear . . . I always forget to keep my eyes glued to a ventriloquist's lips or a magician's hands. (There's a gruesome figure of speech!) Legerdemain fascinates me and fools me, even the kind practiced by Milton Berle and Jack Spooner in the small hours at the Stork Club . . . Fred Astaire's dancing is like rain on the roof.

THESE DAWNINGS must be lonely to the old ship news reporters . . . Cary Grant looks good in bow ties. Most men just look silly . . . I never eat peanuts until Spring comes and I go to the circus. Then I'm not happy until crunching and munching . . . wonder if conversation in a barber shop is off the record or open gossip like in a beauty parlor . . . love to see a policeman with a goatee . . . I never did care for those smug lions in front of the Public Library . . . haven't movies become terribly expensive? Seems as though you could produce a low-budget A picture for the price of four admissions to any of the big Broadway houses.

I HOPE the Rockefellers put the silly seals back in the fountains . . . I must ask my milkman if he ever thinks of the dawn as rosy fingered . . . there isn't a glamour deb in sight this season, so far as I can see . . . Lucius Beebe's beaver-lined coat always reminds me of Ethel Barrymore. I don't know why. Probably an old picture of her I once saw in my childhood . . . I wonder if it's really true that Frederic March pours catsup into his soup. Somebody told me so . . . men wearing berets give me the giggles, I just can't help it . . . I'll fly at any altitude but I wouldn't have the courage to walk on a pair of stilts.

MOVIE CONCEPTIONS of city rooms are improving. Not accurate yet, but improving . . . if I were a caricaturist I'd live in Mayor La Guardia's office . . . I think I'll bet 50 cents on the Giants this season. (Careless of me putting that confession right after a line about Hizzoner) . . . Crooner fads, feuds and fancies are foolish things but I like them . . . who told Lupe Velez to blondine her hair? . . . I've heard Victor Borge's name pronounced nine different ways to date. I think it's Bork-uh, but I'm sure I'm wrong.

Star Shine By Sidney Skolsky

HOLLYWOOD, May 9—You probably don't know the problem of the small town exhibitor. He has to stand behind every picture he shows, and when it's very bad, he has to hide. For the small town exhibitor knows practically every member of his audience personally, and they tell him, in person, what they think of the picture.

This fact is made evident in the comments of the exhibitors in the Motion Picture Herald, for they admit if it is a good picture they stand in the lobby while their customers are leaving, but if it is a baddie they try to avoid meeting the cash customers.

Exhibitor Jonas Thomas, who has a theater in the suburban part of Cincinnati, O., expresses the hide and seek angle in writing about "No Time for Love": "Here's a swell comedy which is just what the people want to see these days. If we only had more attractions of this kind, we wouldn't mind standing at the exit doors and saying good night to our patrons."

And Exhibitor Cleo Manry of Buena Vista, Ga., has this to say about "As Thousands Cheer": "This is the type of picture that makes the exhibitor want to stay in the exhibition game. I hope every exhibitor will get the thrill of playing it that I did. It received wonderful comments such as: 'This is the best show you have ever had' . . . This is one picture you can sell with a money back guarantee and not lose a dime."

★ ★ ★

THE EXHIBITOR still has the same approach to the war films; he doesn't want to play them, but after doing so is surprised that they did business and that the audience liked them.

Exhibitor K. John of Saskatchewan, Canada, has this to say about "This Land Is Mine": "This is an excellent picture. War pictures are not very acceptable, but this feature got favorable comments from my patrons."

Exhibitor Charles A. Brooks of Marshfield, Mo., writes about Guadalcanal Diary": "Here's an especially entertaining war story. It's well produced and well cast with plenty of stirring scenes that we all need to know more about."

Boston After Dark

A FEW FAVORED customers at the Latin Quarter were tipped to the horse "Noahvale," which paid $157.20 for $2 at Gansett . . . Not that Dick, who is the headwaiter in place of Stephen on Sunday nights, is a steady oracle when it comes to horses . . . Nor is the management offering horses at long odds to customers as an offset of the 30 per cent tax . . . But Dick did have "Noahvale" . . . A good customer gave it to him . . . He and most of the horse-playing waiters on his staff made a special expedition to the Pawtucket oval to play the horse . . . And as Sophocles, the handsome steed owned by William Helis, is not only Greek-owned but bears a Graeco name, it was quite a day for the Latin Quarter's lads at the track . . . For Sophocles, once named Valdina Albert, won under a drive to pay better than even money. (Note: Most of the Latin Quarter waiters are of Greek extraction.)

"3 IS A FAMILY" got off to perfect start at the Colonial last night . . . No show this season had won more solid laughs . . . At the Shubert, meantime, an audience was making a startling discovery . . . The four lovely girls who pose as statues in one of the big scenes, the audience discovered, were aiding the cause of art or something last night by appearing for the first time in the altogether . . . Or that, at any rate, is what last night's audience at "Dream With Music" insisted.

WHEN SOME OF the spectators in down-front seats made the startling discovery, the nudging that greeted the discovery was communicated to the whole downstairs audience in seconds, it seemed . . . We do not know the real story . . . There are certain statutes which forbid the appearance of young women in their birthday suits . . . The "Dream With Music" beauties perhaps were so costumed that the illusion of nudity was had . . . But a half-hundred customers are prepared to vow that it was no illusion.

RALPH SNYDER, IN CLOSING THE BRADFORD ROOF'S floor-show, made a generous settlement with Artie Dann . . . The long-nosed young comic was paid off with two and a half weeks' salary for one week's work . . . Ann Griese, of Boston society (and really) is singing at the Fensgate's Satire Room . . . Yvette Baruch, the charming singing sister of Major Andre Baruch, the New York radio announcer, is proving a favorite at the same swank room, and Merwyn Nelson, if he wants to be, can be held over indefinitely . . . But when Michael Todd was in town he talked over the possibility of Merwyn playing a role in "Catherine Was Great," Mae West's new play-ma.

RECOMMENDED: Jerri and Turk at The Mayfair, and—of course—Maxine Sullivan, at the same spot . . . Dean Murphy was stealing the show at the Copley Plaza's Oval Room, and Paul Remus and his two supporting midgets are great at the Latin Quarter . . . The midgets are cute tykes . . . They look and act like little boys . . . Sally Keith's tremendously long run at the Crawford House shows no signs of being abated by the 30 per cent tax, or any other cause . . . Another Scollay Square spot with an undislodgeable public is Joe Nardone's Stagedoor . . . It is a long show at the Stagedoor, and the talent is "solid" . . . Three girl singers, a juggler, an accordionist, a girl-dancer and a colored orchestra are on the current bill . . . It is reminiscent of small-time vaudeville—which used to please a lot of people.

'Same Time Next Week' Opens

By PEGGY DOYLE

"Same Time Next Week," a one-act farce-comedy with a full complement of doors and a stageful of pedestrians to keep them swinging, last night opened a two-week, pre-Broadway engagement, at the Plymouth. Two would get you five that same time next month . . . but enough, the Cassandra business is hardly within the province of this department.

It may be said, though, that the Hartmans, those darlings of the night-club habitues, are not likely to approach those fabulously extended bistro engagements in this, their debut in a straight play. Nor is it improbable that co-producer Milton Berle, detained in New York last night by radio rehearsals, may have to subsist this semester on his wage as star of the "Ziegfeld Follies," thriving Broadway musical; the pretty penny his radio stint nets him and such incidentals as "skin you me to clutch" endorsements, et cetera.

And speaking of radio and its juicy emoluments, that is what "Same Time Next Week" is about in spades. Like "Dream With Music," the Berle-Billings production would have you know that radio biggies suffer from large headache induced by the intermissible necessity to keep rehearsal dates and evict scriptwriters from the belfry.

There comes a time when even celebrated radio comedienne, the better-half of a radio as well as marital team, would toss it all overboard for a home and baby. Make it twins, legally adopted only after the most embarrassing, gimlet-eyed investigation by a committee of two austere women officials, and you have the gist of playwright Kramer's plot.

It is draped on that dependable, timeless show-must-go-on angle, and is forever causing a rush of radio scripters to the footlights until the 'ammer, 'ammer, 'ammer on the 'ardwood boards assumes a clockwork regularity.

The scripters, incidentally, look uncannily like they might have been Dead End Boys in their previous incarnation and could make only with the underworld patois but not with the typewriter. Paul Hartman looks like he is working his wonderfully articulate pan overtime, which is understandable in view of the inadequacy of the script and the direction. Grace Hartman makes the screwy character she is called upon to impersonate as sincere as is possible.

BELITA, charming dancer-skater, is teamed with James Ellison in the Monogram extravaganza, "Lady, Let's Dance," which comes to the Paramount and Fenway screens tomorrow.

'Three Is a Family'

"Three Is a Family," John Golden's Chicago production of the farce-comedy by Phoebe and Henry Ephron, which opened last night at the Colonial, will be reviewed in tomorrow's Boston American.

The program for the Pops tonight in Symphony Hall includes:

Musical for Para-Fenway

"Lady, Let's Dance," Monogram's amitious musical extravaganza starring Skating Champion Belita and likeable James Ellison, and the Charles Laughton-starring thriller, "Man From Down Under," will make up the daily double at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters, starting tomorrow.

Spectacular dance and ice-skating sequences to the tune of hot and sweet music provided by four well-known bands are the highlights of "Lady, Let's Dance." Belita, not content with establishing her ice-skating pre-eminence, is said to delight dookers with her ballroom footwork as she dances with Maurice St.Clair.

Ellison plays the leading male role. Supporting players include Walter Catlett, Helen Littlefield, Frick and Frack, The Henry Busse, Mitch Ayres, Eddie LeBaron and Louring Bring bands and important entertainment features.

Gardner Flier Held in Assault

FITCHBURG, May 9—The mysterious hit-run airplane assault case, in which a mechanic at the Bolton airport was beaten up by two aviators who landed in a light monoplane and then flew away, resulted in the arrest here of James O Brooks, reserve police officer, manager and civilian air patrol flight instructor at the Gardner airport.

Meanwhile, the assault victim, Albert Powell, 25, of Groton, found unconscious in the Bolton airport office, was reported in serious condition at Clinton Hospital.

Berlin, His 25th Raid; Along Sports Scene

By AUSTEN LAKE

BY COINCIDENCE the last soldier this writer interviewed in Britain last winter—1st Lieut. Hugh J. McCarthy of 21 Curve St., Millis—is the first to return home and repay my visit. A bombardier on the famed "Pistol Packin' Mammy," Hugh's 25th and graduating mission was a raid on Berlin. He brings back a gruesome memory—but one with a comforting postlude.

For it was the day before I chatted with Hugh that I watched the first of the Fortresses straggle in from a raid over Frankfort — wide-winged, pencil bellied birds that lost their aerial grace as they alighted. One came in with a propeller gone, its elevators shot away, a flat landing tire and the ragged holes on its fuselage looking as though the moths had been at it. A red signal flare denoted "wounded men on board" and, as the ambulance scooted toward the terminal, I went too.

Adam Walsh

One of the wounded, the pilot, was gentled through the hatch, the entire side of his face laid open, showing glistening membrane tissue. His left eye was gone and the edges of skull bone showed gruesomely through the welling wound. "Will he live?" I whispered to the flight surgeon. He shrugged noncommittally!

That boy's name was Crosby from 42 Highland ave., Old Orchard, Me. And Hugh tells me that now he is healed and whole again, though with a patch over his absent eye. Only a few threads of scar tissue remain as a testimonial to a skilled job of plastic surgery. He is walking around again, though his days of raiding are over. The knowledge that this is so gives me a sense of warm uplift. For it exemplifies the medical miracles our surgeons are performing over there . . .

WONDER WHAT HAPPENED to that quaint custom at Dedham's Myopia Hunt Club whereby, in pre-war times any member guilty of referring to a hound as a "dog" was fined one quart bottle of imported whiskey, the prize going to anyone who happened to be within earshot when the breach was committed. Come to think of it, I wonder what happened to the Myopia Hunt Club, the ultra super Horse and Hounds society, originally named for its nearsighted founding members.

ADAM WALSH, the cultured and personable football teacher for the last nine years at Bowdoin, the quaint, ivy-shawled college in Brunswick, Me., where they take young aristocrats and change them into useful adults, is part-timing as coach at his old alma mammy, Notre Dame. It is questionable whether, at war's end, Adam will ever return to his Maine Eden, where he has become an institution. For every old Notre Damer's dream is to be on the football faculty of his old college. From close contact and long observation I know of no two more manly coaching types than N. D.'s Frank Leahy, now in the Navy, and this same Adam Walsh.

DOES A KNOCKED OUT BOXER experience any pain at the instant of being slugged into unconsciousness? Jack Sharkey, who has been etherized several times in his career, says NO, that beyond the dull shock, a flash of white light and then total and utter darkness, the victim feels nothing. Lightest blows are often most painful, carrying a sting. "As a matter of fact," says Sharkey, "a sound slap on the cheek with the open hand hurts worse than being knocked cold." Add this to things you ought to know! . . .

I HAVE AN indignant letter, asking whether I do not think it disgraceful in these times of warworry that a professional horseman should be paid 60-odd thousand for winning a single race—i. e. Ben Jones' "Pensive" in the Ky. Derby. I say vaguely No! Indignation is too valuable an emotion for so trivial a cause when there are so many thunderous bodies of lower-case, militia politicians drawing public salaries for lick-penny, thumb-twiddling jobs in Boston, Washington and elsewhere. The sport customer has the privilege of buying admissions to sport events like the Derby, or not buying them, as he sees fit. But the taxpayer is given no such gentle consideration by our pork patronage politicos. That's worthy of real indignation . . .

HERE'S SUMPIN'! News item states that "Doctors are endorsing golf as an effective palliative for traumatic war neurosis which hits older and sedentary war workers and conscientious younger workers who are high-pressuring their efforts in mechanized and monotonous labor." Well hemstitch my snuggies! This diagnosis is probably founded on the notion that, if a man gets away from work and worry occasionally, he can work and worry better and with freer mind.

GENIAL OLE HERBIE PENNOCK, the Red Sox pitching and scouting alumnus, has hoisted to raggety Phillies under the eaves of the National League. Herbie is the Phils' office manager. Which reminds me that it is a historic oddity that pitchers have never made competent field managers. Christy Mathewson at Cincinnati, Bob Shawkey of the New York Yankees, Walter Johnson of the Senators and Indians are among those who tried and fumbled. Yet pitchers ought to make the best managers, having plenty of time to sit in the dugout and study the play on the field. They know all the baseball percentages, including weaknesses of opposing hitters and their tendency to hit into certain areas. So why?

ABOUT 50 PER CENT of the OWI's news budget to the troops abroad is sport news. When the writer was touring the combat training areas of Britain recently he found the soldiers hungry for every rind and crust of sport gossip. It's by far the most sport conscious army in the world. Wherever I travelled the Boston G. I.'s were more interested in hearing my eye-witness account of the B. C.-Harvard football game than a discussion of invasion dates or pyramiding taxes or the growth of black marketeering. They crave sport news from home while the home folks yearn for victory news from abroad. Easiest of the two is to give the soldiers what they want rather than for the soldiers to give the home folks their dearest desire. Those who advocate cancellation of sports for the duration, take notice! Selah.

Gil Dodds in Mile Test

By MIKE GILLOOLY

You'll have a choice of track or baseball tomorrow afternoon on the schoolboy sports slate and there'll be a stellar pair of attractions to satisfy the appetites of the followers of the cinder paths and of the diamond.

At Russell Field, Cambridge, Gil Dodds, king of the indoor milers, will run an exhibition handicap mile as a feature of a schoolboy triangular meet while at Playstead Park, West Medford, the Mustangs of Coach Art Tirrell will tangle with B. C. High in the top tilt of a long list of contests. It'd be hard to go wrong at either.

INTEREST KEEN

The efforts of Leander MacDonald and Coach Ed Murphy in bringing Dodds to Cambridge for his first appearance of the season have sparked track interest considerably in this sector. The winner of the 1943 Sullivan award as the outstanding amateur athlete in the U. S. will start from scratch against a handicapped field of Art Quigley, John Preston, both of St. John's prep school, Matt Malloy of Boston Latin who'll be running under club colors, and Don Casey of Everett. A ruling against distance over 1000 yards in the Boston schools will force Malloy to association outside of school ranks.

Dodds won't be at his peak for this try-out, by any means, but Coach Ryder will be looking for a 4:18 or 4:20 mile, depending on the condition of the track. The Russell Field track is a quarter mile oval.

B. C. HIGH-MEDFORD TILT

Boston College High School's sweetheart battery of Frankie and Johnnie (Shellenback and Fitzgibbons) has been nominated to emphasize the Eaglets' bid for a berth in the Eastern State Baseball Championships by taking Medford into camp.

The power-house schedule threw a tremendous burden on the pitching staff. Coach McCann had lined it up to use Shellenback for the Mustangs and then throw Bernie Mulligan against Milton Friday. Mulligan pitched yesterday, either Johnson or Hartnett was to go today with Bob Darcy for the remaining game Thursday.

Shellenback has won two starts this season while rounding into condition. His form and control may do the trick against Medford which has shown a strong liking for speed ball artists. They've belted Giles Powell of Boston English and Charlie Osgood of Somerville, two of the best in local ranks. They'll run into an altogether different proposition in facing the smart slants of Shellenback.

Hagg, Pal Tour Of U. S. Cooking

STOCKHOLM, May 9 (AP)—Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Madison Square Garden board of directors and a U. S. economics expert now visiting Sweden, said today Gunder Hagg and Arne Andersson, Sweden's middle-distance stars, might compete in the U. S. next winter.

"I'm prepared to furnish transportation for both Hagg and Andersson to compete in the indoor meets at the Garden next winter," he said.

According to Griffis, the Swedish pair would oppose Gil Dodds, present holder of the world indoor title, and Bill Hulse, whose 4:06 is the American citizen's outdoor record.

Earlier this spring, Hagg and Andersson declined to come to the U. S. for the outdoor AAU championships because they couldn't get air transportation for the round trip.

Trailway's Nine Makes Debut in Park League

The veteran Linehan Club, with one victory under its belt, will get a taste of some outstanding pitching when Tom Buckley takes the mound for Trailway's initial game in the Boston Park League tonight at Jefferson Field, Roxbury.

Buckley, the mainstay of the Trailway pitching staff, has the stuff to get the new club off to a good start and if he's right he'll be unbeatable.

In the one remaining opener on the list the Watertown Arsenal plays host to the West Roxbury A. A., that dropped its first start to Linehan last night. Manager Lou Strecker hasn't announced his hurler as yet but "Lefty" Johnson will take over the pitching duties for Vin Murphy's club.

The only other game on the card for tonight is a rematch between Lawley's and the Hicks Engineering team at Garvey Field, Neponset. In the first game between the two Lawley's won, 11 to 5. Jim Pucillo, a newcomer to the Park loop, will pitch for Hicks while Hal Crosby has chosen Norm Smith, undefeated in four starts last year, as his starter tonight.

8-Game Schedule For Eli Grid Team

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 9 (AP)—The Yale football team will play an eight-game schedule this fall with all contests to be held in the Yale Bowl, Athletic Director Ogden Miller announced today.

Seven of the games have been booked, but Nov. 28, the date of the last game, has been left open pending Princeton's decision about football. The New York News said today that Princeton had decided not to play this fall, but an announcement from the university said no decision had been made as yet.

A. A. U. to Aid Swimming Drive of Hearst Papers

By JACK CONWAY

LAWRENCE J. JOHNSON, national chairman of the men's A. A. U. swimming committee, has given the full endorsement of the A. A. U. to the Hearst newspapers for their campaign to aid swimming as an important part of the war effort. Johnson has been the leader in staging major swimming meets in various parts of the United States, and in also helping thousands of service men to learn how to swim.

Johnson's letter, addressed to this writer, is as follows:

"May I express through you the full appreciation of our National Swimming Committee and our interest in this country - wide campaign by the Hearst newspapers to stimulate swimming activity.

Lawrence J. Johnson

"Fostering swimming competition for boys and girls this summer at beaches and lakes, at municipal parks and pools will put the proper emphasis on the absolute need of children, and adults as well, learning to swim.

"We want everyone, if possible, to realize the great happy feeling of security that comes to every home where all the children have learned to swim. We call it Water Safety that removes fear and worry, and swimming races are only the result of teaching Water Safety.

"Classifying the boys and girls into three age groups has achieved most satisfying results where instructors can hold their competitions locally and through elimination trials bring their swimmers to a large meet at the conclusion of the season.

"We can advise the Hearst newspapers that our A. A. U. stands solidly with them in this our work and await the call throughout the country to help organize and conduct the competition.

"Immeasureable good will result from this campaign and I am sure that every locality where swimming is conducted will be grateful to the Hearst newspapers for devoting the funds and publicity to assure its success."

Swimming and Safety

SWIMMING IS vital to the safety of children as well as of adults. The various branches of the armed services have emphasized the importance of learning how to swim.

Lawrence J. Johnson and his numerous lieutenants in different parts of the United States have assisted thousands of service men in learning how to swim. As a result of this expert instruction, many youngsters in combat areas have been able to save their lives, and also assist in the rescue of others.

I dropped into the pool in the Rockne Memorial Building at Notre Dame last winter and saw large groups of Navy men learning how to swim under burning oil. It had been first necessary to teach many of these men ordinary swimming. Boys who knew how to swim found it much easier to master the art of swimming under water, and also how to swim rapidly away from a sinking ship or floundering airplane.

Levias Active Here

BEN LEVIAS, who has been so unselfish in devoting his time to amateur athletics, has been busy organizing swimming meets for Greater Boston. He has been named director of a series of swimming events that will be conducted under the direction of the American-Record and Sunday Advertiser.

There will also be special places where children will be taught how to swim. Full details will be announced later.

The Hearst newspapers will conduct their vast swimming campaign in every part of the United States. With the full support of the A. A. U., as pledged by Lawrence J. Johnson, the success of these events is assured.

Raps Pros Signing Schoolboys

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, May 9 (AP)—Minor League Commissioner William G. Bramham has emitted a justifiable yelp over the growing practice of pro baseball clubs singing high school and college kids during school terms, but we think he might have enlarged on the reasons for his objections.

Bramham's concern mainly was the interference with the eligibility of the student as it pertained to school athletics, and the idea the practice would incur the disfavor of the very institutions whose good-will professional baseball is very anxious to promote.

NOT FAIR TO KIDS

As an added, and perhaps a chief, objection we would consider the fact that such signings are not fair to the kids, who naturally are delighted and flattered by the attention of the pro clubs, and are prone to quit school at the earliest opportunity to cash in on their talents.

Baseball has come a long ways since the early days when pro players were considered more or less roughnecks whose presence at more genteel spots was discouraged, and a factor in this upgrade travel has been the entrance into the game of men with sound educations.

To influence kids who have not completed high school to quit their search for learning in favor of an immediate baseball career would seem to be a step backward.

The pro footballers have taken a wise attitude toward signing college athletes. Until recently a collegian couldn't play on a National Pro League team until his class had been graduated and he had used up his eligibility. This has been changed so that college men who have quit school and have no intention of returning may be signed, but that is a development of the war emergency.

Pro baseball clubs rely a great deal on tips from high school and college coaches in lining up prospects, and incurring the displeasure of these tutors would be like cutting the supply line as far as the pro clubs are concerned, as a coach isn't going to tell a scout about the great shortstop prospect he has if the scout is going to sign him up pronto, thus ending the usefulness of the lad as far as the coach is concerned.

But it's the interference with the education of the kids that should be of the greatest concern A high school boy can't see any farther ahead than tomorrow, and as he'd rather play baseball than eat, and can get paid for doing it, that's what he'll do and he won't worry about 10 or 15 years hence when a little learning he might accidentally pick up through finishing school might come in handy.

Legion to Stage Big Track Meet

For the third consecutive year the Department of Rhode Island, American Legion, will sponsor the Eastern Interscholastic Track and Field championships, which this year will be staged at Brown Stadium in Providence on Memorial Day, May 30, and will be conducted by the Rhode Island Track and Field Officials Ass'n.

All the color that once was part of the Olympic games -the parade of athletes, flag raising ceremonies, and presentation of awards—will be part of the program of the day. Dept. Comdr. George E. Withington, Jr., will administer the Olympic oath to the participants. The usual 14-event program will be supplemented by a 1-mile relay.

Three records will be at stake in each event, but the relay. They are the marks for the eastern interscholastics, the Brown schoolboy and Brown track. It is assured that at least two meet records will be established this year. Since in the two previous Legion sponsored meets held at Pierce Memorial Stadium, East Providence, the 220-yard dash and 220-yard low hurdles were run around one turn, new marks will be set in these events. Brown stadium has a 220-yard straightaway.

In 1942, the first year the Legion sponsored the meet, 19 schools from New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island participated, and last year, although some schools dropped track, 20 teams were entered. They came from Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. It is expected that teams from the New York-New Jersey area will enter again this year, since the affair will be run on the fast Brown stadium track.

Princeton Quits Grid for War

NEW HAVEN, May 9 (AP)—With reports from New York indicating that Princeton has dropped football for the duration, Yale will undoubtedly be the sole surviving member of the Big Three on the collegiate gridiron this season.

Yale has not released its official football schedule for 1944, but inference that the team will compete has been drawn from the inclusion of the Yale team on other schedules which have been released.

Director of Athletics Ogden Miller declared in January that as long as conditions remained as they were then, the university planned to continue its formal sports program.

At present, 62 football candidates are working out in the Payne Whitney Gymnasium under a conditioning program.

Meadows Vaults 14 Feet in China

HEADQUARTERS, FOURTEENTH AIR FORCE IN CHINA, May 8 (delayed) (AP)—Curley-haired Earle Meadows, looking almost as lean and trim as when he won the 1936 Olympic pole vault event at Berlin, has added a new, if unofficial, Chinese vault record to his collection.

Although he had done no vaulting for 18 months, Meadows, now a first lieutenant and special service officer at Maj.-Gen. Claire L. Chennault's headquarters, cleared 14 feet in an exhibition staged in connection with an all-Chinese meet.

Meadows cleared 12 feet 6 inches on his first jump after having found a pair of brand new spiked shoes among the Red Cross stores at he post. He nextcleared 12 feet 2 inches and soon breezed over 14 feet.

His efforts delighted the Chinese audience and thec rowd cheered the Californian with a salvo of "ting hao."

They also sympathized with Meadows when he barely missed 14 feet 3 inches on each of his allotted three tries.

Braves Start Trek to West

Bob Coleman and his merry men hit the trail westward at 4 p. m. today with the first stop Pittsburgh where they tangle with the Pirates tomorrow night.

The past week at home has added a cocky spirit to the Braves which has not existed since the first week of the active season. The warriors now feel that as a result of their 4 to 1 series with the Giants that they are now definitely back in the pennant race. Coleman has his fingers crossed but the members of the team, particularly the youngsters, feel that the team will hit its stride during the trip through the wild and wooly west.

That something will be done to help out the long suffering pitching staff with a single at least now and then was indicated in the last tough workout at Braves Field. Batting and more batting was the order of the day.

Tight Flag Races Seen in Both Loops

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baseball's manpower problem appears today to have passed the acute stage as the major leagues settle down to a six-month run with pleasant prospects of tight pennant races and night baseball to bolster mid-week attendance figures.

When the big show resumes tomorrow, after a two-day travel interlude, they'll turn on the lights at Washington, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh and the "Owl Ball" season will be under way.

Draft boards still hold the balance of power in every league, but major league rosters have not undergone drastic changes since the season opened.

STARS TAKEN

In addition to the American and National loops, the complete minor league setup is in operation with three double-A circuits, one A-1 league, one a a circuit, two Class B and three Class B organizations. So far, nobody has had to play with less than nine men.

Since the manpower problem became at least temporarily stabilized such stars as Spud Chandler of the Yankees and Joe Beggs of the Reds have bene taken but many others still are playing.

Several players on each big league club are on lend-lease from the armed services after passing their physical exams, but they are playing until called. In that list, among others, are Gee Walker of the Reds, Damon Phillips, Connie Ryan and Butch Nieman of the Boston Braves; Bobby Bragan of Brooklyn, Johnny Lindell of the Yanks and Ray Hamrick of the Phils.

The stream heading toward the service is partially matched by a steady influx of war veterans who are finding their way into the national game. Tom Warren, a Brooklyn pitcher who was at Casablanca, belongs in that category, as does Jack Kramer, St. Louis Browns' mound sensation who did a hitch in the Navy.

Rudy York's rejection sent Detroit stock on the upgrade and the acceptance or rejection of Ken Keltner of Cleveland will affect their chances. Keltner was held over for further examination yesterday when called at a Milwaukee induction center.

Buddy Rosar of the Tribe has transferred from a Buffalo to a Cleveland war job and is available for part-time duty, as is Denny Galehouse, the Browns' week-end pitcher.

Pensive All Set For Preakness

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 9 (AP)—Warren Wright's Pensive, winner of the Kentucky Derby, is in Baltimore where he will enter the Preakness this week-end.

Pinky Brown, veteran exercise boy, accompanied the Calumet Farm's pride. Trainer Ben Jones, who has been resting near Lexington, was at Pimlico in time to receive his champion.

Tech, Tufts Seen Tops at Track

Two Greater Boston colleges, M. I. T. and Tufts, are among the possible winners in the 57th annual New England Intercollegiate Track Meet Saturday morning and afternoon at Tech Field, Cambridge.

Boston College is certain of some points because of its Herb McKenley, West Indies star sprinter, but the fourth local institution, Northeastern University, is not expected to figure among the leaders.

Oscar Hedlund of Tech has a well-balanced team including two New England Intercollegiate point-scorers of last year—Arthur Bryant, fourth in the quarter-mile, and William H. Pasfield, tied for fourth in the running high jump. Tufts has a fair team including E. J. Palmieri, who was third in the quarter-mile last year.

Johnson Says Shucco Fouled

BALTIMORE, May 9 (AP)—James J. (Jimmie) Johnston, manager of the veteran Boston heavyweight Tony Shucco, said today that his fighter had been given a "big raw deal" last night when he was knocked out by Curtis (Hatchetman) Sheppard, Pittsburgh Negro, in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round bout.

Johnston, who is booming Shucco as a heavyweight title contender, claimed that his protege had been fouled repeatedly by Sheppard, and was not knocked out.

Furthermore, Johnston said Referee Lee Halfpenny had not counted to 10 after the deciding blow, and the New York manager declared he would demand a rematch.

Sheppard, 187-pound slugger, who claims he can kayo any opponent he can hit—and has an impressive sleep-producing record to back it up—tagged Shucco with a right cross to the button 35 seconds after the fifth round opened.

The Bostonian, who had been felled or slipped to the canvas three times previously, hit the deck again. He was attempting to gain his feet, but wasn't erect when Halfpenny counted 10.

The Boston Italian took a nine-count in the third round, and the referee instructed the two judges to take away the fourth round from Hatchetman because of a foul claim by Shucco. Shucco scaled 184½.

A. A. U. to Aid Swimming Drive of Hearst Papers

By JACK CONWAY

LAWRENCE J. JOHNSON, national chairman of the men's A. A. U. swimming committee, has given the full endorsement of the A. A. U. to the Hearst newspapers for their campaign to aid swimming as an important part of the war effort. Johnson has been the leader in staging major swimming meets in various parts of the United States, and in also helping thousands of service men to learn how to swim.

Johnson's letter, addressed to this writer, is as follows:

"May I express through you the full appreciation of our National Swimming Committee and our interest in this country - wide campaign by the Hearst newspapers to stimulate swimming activity.

Lawrence J. Johnson

"Fostering swimming competition for boys and girls this summer at beaches and lakes, at municipal parks and pools will put the proper emphasis on the absolute need of children, and adults as well, learning to swim.

"We want everyone, if possible, to realize the great happy feeling of security that comes to every home where all the children have learned to swim. We call it Water Safety that removes fear and worry, and swimming races are only the result of teaching Water Safety.

"Classifying the boys and girls into three age groups has achieved most satisfying results where instructors can hold their competitions locally and through elimination trials bring their swimmers to a large meet at the conclusion of the season.

"We can advise the Hearst newspapers that our A. A. U. stands solidly with them in this our work and await the call throughout the country to help organize and conduct the competition.

"Immeasureable good will result from this campaign and I am sure that every locality where swimming is conducted will be grateful to the Hearst newspapers for devoting the funds and publicity to assure its success."

Swimming and Safety

SWIMMING IS vital to the safety of children as well as of adults. The various branches of the armed services have emphasized the importance of learning how to swim.

Lawrence J. Johnson and his numerous lieutenants in different parts of the United States have assisted thousands of service men in learning how to swim. As a result of this expert instruction, many youngsters in combat areas have been able to save their lives, and also assist in the rescue of others.

I dropped into the pool in the Rockne Memorial Building at Notre Dame last winter and saw large groups of Navy men learning how to swim under burning oil. It had been first necessary to teach many of these men ordinary swimming. Boys who knew how to swim found it much easier to master the art of swimming under water, and also how to swim rapidly away from a sinking ship or floundering airplane.

Levias Active Here

BEN LEVIAS, who has been so unselfish in devoting his time to amateur athletics, has been busy organizing swimming meets for Greater Boston. He has been named director of a series of swimming events that will be conducted under the direction of the American-Record and Sunday Advertiser.

There will also be special places where children will be taught how to swim. Full details will be announced later.

The Hearst newspapers will conduct their vast swimming campaign in every part of the United States. With the full support of the A. A. U., as pledged by Lawrence J. Johnson, the success of these events is assured.

Raps Pros Signing Schoolboys

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, May 9 (AP)—Minor League Commissioner William G. Bramham has emitted a justifiable yelp over the growing practice of pro baseball clubs singing high school and college kids during school terms, but we think he might have enlarged on the reasons for his objections.

Bramham's concern mainly was the interference with the eligibility of the student as it pertained to school athletics, and the idea the practice would incur the disfavor of the very institutions whose good-will professional baseball is very anxious to promote.

NOT FAIR TO KIDS

As an added, and perhaps a chief, objection we would consider the fact that such signings are not fair to the kids, who naturally are delighted and flattered by the attention of the pro clubs, and are prone to quit school at the earliest opportunity to cash in on their talents.

Baseball has come a long ways since the early days when pro players were considered more or less roughnecks whose presence at more genteel spots was discouraged, and a factor in this upgrade travel has been the entrance into the game of men with sound educations.

To influence kids who have not completed high school to quit their search for learning in favor of an immediate baseball career would seem to be a step backward.

The pro footballers have taken a wise attitude toward signing college athletes. Until recently a collegian couldn't play on a National Pro League team until his class had been graduated and he had used up his eligibility. This has been changed so that college men who have quit school and have no intention of returning may be signed, but that is a development of the war emergency.

Pro baseball clubs rely a great deal on tips from high school and college coaches in lining up prospects, and incurring the displeasure of these tutors would be like cutting the supply line as far as the pro clubs are concerned, as a coach isn't going to tell a scout about the great shortstop prospect he has if the scout is going to sign him up pronto, thus ending the usefulness of the lad as far as the coach is concerned.

But it's the interference with the education of the kids that should be of the greatest concern. A high school boy can't see any farther ahead than tomorrow, and as he'd rather play baseball than eat, and can get paid for doing it, that's what he'll do and he won't worry about 10 or 15 years hence when a little learning he might accidentally pick up through finishing school might come in handy.

Legion to Stage Big Track Meet

For the third consecutive year the Department of Rhode Island, American Legion, will sponsor the Eastern Interscholastic Track and Field championships, which this year will be staged at Brown Stadium in Providence on Memorial Day, May 30, and will be conducted by the Rhode Island Track and Field Officials Ass'n.

All the color that once was part of the Olympic games—the parade of athletes, flag raising ceremonies, and presentation of awards—will be part of the program of the day. Dept. Comdr. George E. Withington, Jr., will administer the Olympic oath to the participants. The usual 14-event program will be supplemented by a 1-mile relay.

Three records will be at stake in each event, but the relay. They are the marks for the eastern interscholastics, the Brown schoolboy and Brown track. It is assured that at least two meet records will be established this year. Since in the two previous Legion sponsored meets held at Pierce Memorial Stadium, East Providence, the 220-yard dash and 220-yard low hurdles were run around one turn, new marks will be set in these events. Brown stadium has a 220-yard straightaway.

In 1942, the first year the Legion sponsored the meet, 19 schools from New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island participated, and last year, although some schools dropped track, 20 teams were entered. They came from Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. It is expected that teams from the New York-New Jersey area will enter again this year, since the affair will be run on the fast Brown stadium track.

Princeton Quits Grid for War

NEW HAVEN, May 9 (AP)—With reports from New York indicating that Princeton has dropped football for the duration, Yale will undoubtedly be the sole surviving member of the Big Three on the collegiate gridiron this season.

Yale has not released its official football schedule for 1944, but inference that the team will compete has been drawn from the inclusion of the Yale team on other schedules which have been released.

Director of Athletics Ogden Miller declared in January that as long as conditions remained as they were then, the university planned to continue its formal sports program.

At present, 62 football candidates are working out in the Payne Whitney Gymnasium under a conditioning program.

Meadows Vaults 14 Feet in China

HEADQUARTERS, FOURTEENTH AIR FORCE IN CHINA, May 8 (delayed) (AP)—Curley-haired Earle Meadows, looking almost as lean and trim as when he won the 1936 Olympic pole vault event at Berlin, has added a new, if unofficial, Chinese vault record to his collection.

Although he had done no vaulting for 18 months, Meadows, now a first lieutenant and special service officer at Maj.-Gen. Claire L. Chennault's headquarters, cleared 14 feet in an exhibition staged in connection with an all-Chinese meet.

Meadows cleared 12 feet 6 inches on his first jump after having found a pair of brand new spiked shoes among the Red Cross stores at he post. He nextcleared 12 feet 2 inches and soon breezed over 14 feet.

His efforts delighted the Chinese audience and thec rowd cheered the Californian with a salvo of "ting hao."

They also sympathized with Meadows when he barely missed 14 feet 3 inches on each of his allotted three tries.

Braves Start Trek to West

Bob Coleman and his merry men hit the trail westward at 4 p. m. today with the first stop Pittsburgh where they tangle with the Pirates tomorrow night.

The past week at home has added a cocky spirit to the Braves which has not existed since the first week of the active season. The warriors now feel that as a result of their 4 to 1 series with the Giants that they are now definitely back in the pennant race. Coleman has his fingers crossed but the members of the team, particularly the youngsters, feel that the team will hit its stride during the trip through the wild and wooly west.

That something will be done to help out the long suffering pitching staff with a single at least now and then was indicated in the last tough workout at Braves Field. Batting and more batting was the order of the day.

Tech, Tufts Seen Tops at Track

Two Greater Boston colleges, M. I. T. and Tufts, are among the possible winners in the 57th annual New England Intercollegiate Track Meet Saturday morning and afternoon at Tech Field, Cambridge.

Boston College is certain of some points because of its Herb McKenley, West Indies star sprinter, but the fourth local institution, Northeastern University, is not expected to figure among the leaders.

Oscar Hedlund of Tech has a well-balanced team including two New England Intercollegiate point-scorers of last year—Arthur Bryant, fourth in the quarter-mile, and William H. Pasfield, tied for fourth in the running high jump. Tufts has a fair team including E. J. Palmieri, who was third in the quarter-mile last year.

Tight Flag Races Seen in Both Loops

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baseball's manpower problem appears today to have passed the acute stage as the major leagues settle down to a six-month run with pleasant prospects of tight pennant races and night baseball to bolster mid-week attendance figures.

When the big show resumes tomorrow, after a two-day travel interlude, they'll turn on the lights at Washington, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh and the "Owl Ball" season will be under way.

Draft boards still hold the balance of power in every league, but major league rosters have not undergone drastic changes since the season opened.

STARS TAKEN

In addition to the American and National loops, the complete minor league setup is in operation with three double-A circuits, one A-1 league, one a a circuit, two Class B and three Class B organizations. So far, nobody has had to play with less than nine men.

Since the manpower problem became at least temporarily stabilized such stars as Spud Chandler of the Yankees and Joe Beggs of the Reds have bene taken but many others still are playing.

Several players on each big league club are on lend-lease from the armed services after passing their physical exams, but they are playing until called. In that list, among others, are Gee Walker of the Reds, Damon Phillips, Connie Ryan and Butch Nieman of the Boston Braves; Bobby Bragan of Brooklyn, Johnny Lindell of the Yanks and Ray Hamrick of the Phils.

The stream heading toward the service is partially matched by a steady influx of war veterans who are finding their way into the national game. Tom Warren, a Brooklyn pitcher who was at Casablanca, belongs in that category, as does Jack Kramer, St. Louis Browns' mound sensation who did a hitch in the Navy.

Rudy York's rejection sent Detroit stock on the upgrade and the acceptance or rejection of Ken Keltner of Cleveland will affect their chances. Keltner was held over for further examination yesterday when called at a Milwaukee induction center.

Buddy Rosar of the Tribe has transferred from a Buffalo to a Cleveland war job and is available for part-time duty, as is Denny Galehouse, the Browns' week-end pitcher.

Johnson Says Shucco Fouled

BALTIMORE, May 9 (AP)—James J. (Jimmie) Johnston, manager of the veteran Boston heavyweight Tony Shucco, said today that his fighter had been given a "big raw deal" last night when he was knocked out by Curtis (Hatchetman) Sheppard, Pittsburgh Negro, in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round bout.

Johnston, who is booming Shucco as a heavyweight title contender, claimed that his protege had been fouled repeatedly by Sheppard, and was not knocked out.

Furthermore, Johnston said Referee Lee Halfpenny had not counted to 10 after the deciding blow, and the New York manager declared he would demand a rematch.

Sheppard, 187-pound slugger, who claims he can kayo any opponent he can hit—and has an impressive sleep-producing record to back it up—tagged Shucco with a right cross to the button 35 seconds after the fifth round opened.

The Bostonian, who had been felled or slipped to the canvas three times previously, hit the deck again. He was attempting to gain his feet, but wasn't erect when Halfpenny counted 10.

The Boston Italian took a nine-count in the third round, and the referee instructed the two judges to take away the fourth round from Hatchetman because of a foul claim by Shucco. Shucco scaled 184¾.

Up the perpendicular side of a cliff on Britain's rugged coast, a unit of American medical corpsmen carry a "stretcher case" ... as they undergo intensive training for the invasion of Europe.

Allied officials tabbed this preinvasion maneuver as probably the largest mass exhibition jump ever conducted by its forces. Some 1500 men took part in the test ... over an unidentified base in Britain. Paratroopers leap from (top) C-47 transports.
